1900 FALL IN BIG BATTLE

VILLA CLAIMS TORREON VICTORY

SEELY OUT, CABINET IS ALARMED

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, March 25.—Premier Asquith's cabinet was shaken today by the resignation of Colonel John Edward Bernard Seely, secretary of war. The resignations was officially announced this afternoon. The head of the war department gave up his post because of interference with his plans for mobilizing the army to crush the Ulster volunteers organized to fight home rule. Premier Asquith refused to accept the resignation.

News of Seely's resignation came while the House of Commons was holding the stormiest session that has marked the progress of legislation since the home rule bill was introduced.

Colonel Seely made a long statement in his own behalf, speaking coldly and in unimpassioned tones, the War Secretary gave his own version of the War Office's activities. He read government correspondence bearing upon the matter and declared that the military preparations were all of a precautionary nature.

"Unfortunately the officers who resigned were laboring under a misapprehension," said the official. "They got the impression that the government intended to treat Ulster as an enemy and overwhelm her in a surprise attack, but this is entirely untrue."

Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, one of the chief advocates of an aggressive policy against the people of Ulster, was made the target for an attack by the Unionists shortly after the House of Commons convened. He was bombarded with questions as to the attitude of the government toward Ulster, and replied until asked whether he had hoped that the precautions taken to guard the government stores in Ulster would cause fighting.

UPROAR IN HOUSE.

In leaping to his feet the head of the British navy shouted:

"Perhaps it may be allowed to repudiate that hellish insinuation."

A prolonged uproar followed, the Unionists demanding that Churchill withdraw the expression "Hellish insinuation," and the Liberals shouting "No! No! He's right."

Speaker Lowther finally ruled that Churchill would have to withdraw the expression, and he complied amid a deafening din of shrieks and hisses.

When the confusion over the

Many Shots Fired as Rival Factions Clash in Belfast

BELFAST, Ireland, March 25.—Only sharp action by the police prevented a series of riots here today, when supporters of the Ulster anti-home rule policy and Irish Nationalists came into open conflict.

The outbreak, the first case of violence that has marred the tension in this city, occurred in Cromac square. It developed from rival meetings held by adherents of the home rule bill and its foes. Extra police had been sent to the square to prevent disorder, but despite their presence the clash occurred.

Accounts differ as to which faction made the attack, but within a few minutes two hundred men were hurling tooth and nail. Many revolver shots were fired, but the rioting mass was charged by additional police dispatched to the scene in automobiles. About twenty arrests were made.

Three men were badly beaten.

Several persons who were not involved in the conflict were injured by missiles thrown by the rioters. Two women were taken to hospitals.

Today's clash of the opposing factions, while not of great seriousness in itself, is indicative of the critical situation here. It is probable that all political meetings will be forbidden in the future unless the leaders can guarantee that they will prevent further riots.

Lydig Hoyt to Marry Julia W. Robbins

With the North Shore season only a few weeks away, there was wide interest in Boston today at the announcement of the engagement of Miss Julia W. Robbins and Lydig Hoyt. Young Hoyt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Lydig Hoyt, who have a Summer home at Ipswich, and Miss Robbins, a New York society girl, has often visited North Shore families. She is known as one of the most beautiful young women in New York.

Stores That Must Succeed

Given a good location, a sensibly selected stock, an owner who knows the meaning of the word "service" and the value of modern merchandising methods and you have a store founded on well established principles of success.

The "Business Opportunities" columns of the Boston American are always rife with such opportunities for the right kind of men. Many stores offered for sale have wealth-producing possibilities far beyond the imagination of the present owners.

If you are looking for an established business in some particular location, it will pay you to read the opportunities a few pages over, or if you are in a hurry, a "Want Ad" of your own will quicken the success of your search.

Simply put your requirements on paper and leave with any of the American's "Want Ad" Stations, the branch office at 264 Washington Street, Main office at 80 Summer Street, or

MAN KILLS HIMSELF OF PRATT IN SALOON

Over in William F. McLellan's saloon at No. 382 Chelsea street, East Boston, half a dozen men were at the bar at noon today, but none of them paid any particular attention to the tall, gray man of about fifty who entered the door and looked dazedly about the room.

This man walked slowly across toward the bar, then changed his mind and turned toward the telephone booth. The next moment the men at the bar whirled at the sharp crack of a revolver shot. Through the fuming smoke they saw the man—a revolver in his hand—tottering limply to the floor. He had shot himself in the temple, just above the right eye.

The three bartenders took the names of the customers and then closed the saloon, telephoning the police. Inquiry developed a rumor that the man, whose name was not learned, lived at No. 22 Pope street. Some one said he had been an occasional visitor at the saloon for some time, but never a drinking man. Some one else thought they had heard him speak of a mortgage.

Medical Examiner Marrath was notified.

Mrs. Bryan Calls Villa True Patriot: 'He Doesn't Smoke'

WASHINGTON, March 25.—A spirited defence of General Villa by Mrs. William J. Bryan, wife of the secretary of State, during a discussion of Mexican affairs, has set the Cabinet women talking.

One of a group of women remarked: "I can't understand why the government should recognize this man Villa. His treatment of the women of Mexico has been shameful. If we had him in America we would string him to the nearest tree."

Mrs Bryan retorted: "He is a man of the loftiest impulses. He is a true patriot and a man of the finest impulses, and furthermore he neither drinks nor smokes."

Carnegie Balks on British Oath

EDINBURGH, March 25.—Andrew Carnegie, it is stated, will not be a candidate for the Chancellorship of Aberdeen University, which has been vacant since the death of Lord Strathcona. The reason is that the Chancellor of the Scottish University must take the oath of office, and Carnegie, as an American citizen, refuses to take any oath of office in Great Britain.

This leaves Lord Bryce as the most likely candidate for the chancellorship.

Begin Arguments in 'De Luxe' Case

Arguments in the "de luxe" books fraud cases were started today before Judge Chase and the jury in the Suffolk Superior Court, where three defendants are on trial charged with conspiracy and with the larceny of $87,075 from Mrs. Mary L. Rogers of No. 906 Beacon street, Back Bay. It is expected that the case will reach the jury by noon

CREDITORS ASK PROBE

Grand Jury action is demanded by many of the creditors of the curb brokerage firm of B. C. Pratt & Company, No. 19 Congress street, which on Saturday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, showing $151,704.54 liabilities.

Some of the creditors have engaged special counsel. They are talking of taking concerted action and of asking District Attorney Pelletier to sift the muddle.

Creditors charge securities were hypothecated. The $55,402 assets cited in the schedule are said to be stock of enterprises and mines of questionable value. All sorts of rumors were in circulation on the "street." Sensational developments are looked for.

There are nearly 400 creditors and all are indignant. Not a few are women. The majority of the creditors could ill afford to lose investments. Many were hard hit. It represents their life's savings.

The past few days creditors have been storming the office of Receiver Forrest F. Collier, No. 53 Devonshire street. He admitted today the affairs of the company were "badly complicated."

CLERKS SEEK PAY.

The members of the firm of B. C. Pratt & Company were Bernard C. Pratt, formerly of No. 11 Queensbury street, Dorchester, but now a resident of Brookline, and George H. Presby of Malden. Pratt's son, Harold, was cashier.

For nine years the firm occupied nearly all of the sixth landing of the building at No. 19 Congress street. The rent was nearly $200 a month. The firm had branch offices at No. 53 Devonshire street and at Worcester and Brockton.

The only one of these branches still open is that at No. 53 Devonshire street. This was managed by E. F. Sibley, who said he sold out to the Pratt Company but continued as manager. Mr. Sibley said today that after the failure last week so many trades asked him to continue that he leased a wire on his own account.

The bankruptcy petition shows that seven office clerks hold claims for pay. The secured claims amount to $35,500 and the unsecured to $119,-151.20. The Somerville National Bank has claims for $30,000, but holds securities. The other secured claims are Thomas F. Gaine & Company, members of the Boston Curb Exchange, $1,300, and Wiggin & Eelwell, No. 53 State street, $1,200.

WOMEN HAVE CLAIMS.

Among unsecured creditors are: Mrs. Mary W. Munroe, No. 97 University road, Brookline, $1,782; Mrs. S. M. Johnstone, No. 3 Temple avenue, Winthrop, $1,351; Frank P. Fogg, No. 201 Columbia road, $2,495; George C. English, No. 865 Main street, Malden, $4,025; C. W. Morse, Bernard Corbett, Walter H. Knowles, No. 84 State street, $2,105; T. J. Cronin, Norwood, $832; William H. Furbush, 1st Asst. Sec., $2,838; Lemuel K. Ford, Kingston, $1,837; Robert E. Hamilton, $2,810; Maynard Newcomb, United States Hotel, $1,062; Henry N. Shreve, Lawson road, Winchester, $12,161.

Will Not Stop Speer Probe if He Resigns

WASHINGTON, March 25. — The House Judiciary Committee will not withdraw the charges that have been filed against Judge Emory Speer of the United States District of Georgia, even if the jurist offers to resign from the bench.

LATEST BULLETINS FROM BATTLEFIELD

JUAREZ, Mexico, March 25.—A censorship over the wires from Chihuahua to Juarez was established by the Constitutionalists today immediately after the International News dispatch from El Verjel was received. Efforts to secure an explanation of the censorship failed. This led to a belief that General Villa had met with a sharp setback from the Federals in Torreon. A number of messages came through to Governor Chao, but when he was asked what news had been received from the front he replied: "Nothing of importance."

MEXICO CITY, March 25.—"The rebels are attacking in force but losing heavily. We are more than holding our own."

War Department officials today announced the receipt of the foregoing dispatch from General Velasco, Federal commander at Torreon. It was transmitted to President Huerta immediately. Though Velasco gave no details of the fighting in this message, it served to end the rumors that the troops at Torreon had mutinied and surrendered the town to the army of General Villa.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Confidence of the Mexican government that its troops will be able to repel General Vila's attack on Torreon was shown by a message received at the Mexican embassy from Mexico City today. It was sent by Senor Portillo Y Rojas, minister of foreign relations, and was as follows.

"Torreon not captured by rebels. City well fortified and provisioned and able to hold out for considerable time. General Velasco fully equipped to defend city."

DYNAMITE ICE, GET BODIES OF TWO CHILDREN

CLAREMONT, N. H. March 25.—The bodies of the two children, Alex Yaska and Alex Bondarintet, aged four and one-half and five years, respectively, who while walking hand in hand on the ice in the back of River street block, on the Sugar river, last yesterday afternoon, suddenly dropped through, were taken out today after dynamite was used to break up the ice where the children finally disappeared. The bodies were discovered side by side about 200 feet from the Paper Mill pond.

At the time when the bodies were discovered there was a crowd of more than 200 people at the end of the bridge. The police had great difficulty in holding the crowd back. The mothers of the two children were in the crowd and there was considerable excitement there. Both mothers identified the children.

Sullivan Fights to Stop 'Ape' Dances

Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester went up Beacon Hill today ready to battle for his "anti-tango" bill, which was scheduled for disposal on the House calendar, handicapped by an adverse report of the Committee on Social Welfare. "Our gilded youth," he said, "have tried, and with considerable success, to bring the dance to the level of the twistings of the ancient apes and cave men."

HAVERHILL HIGH SCHOOL PAIR ELOPE

HAVERHILL March 25.—All's fair in love, and through a policy of "watchful waiting" D. Cupid can sometimes find the way. So while in the senior class of the Haverhill High School S. Austin Rand, seventeen years old, son of a wealthy contractor, wooed Miss Bertha E. Peterkin, the same age. They watched and waited and then—well, today they surprised their friends with the announcement that they had eloped and married more than three months ago.

Last Fall Miss Peterkin quit school and became a telephone operator. Young Rand quit and entered his father's business. He kept up his courtship, and as both realized their parents would never consent to a wedding because of their youth, they planned the elopement.

The five-day law had no terrors for them, so last December they secretly made a trip to Plaistow, N. H., and filed their intentions. They came home and exactly five days later went back to Plaistow, where they were married by the town officers there.

The couple managed to keep their marriage a secret until a few days ago, when the marriage certificate was discovered by Miss Peterkin's older sister. This led to the announcement today.

The couple are to make their home with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Rand, of this city.

TORREON TAKEN AFTER BLOODIEST BATTLE OF WAR

TORREON, via El Vergil, Mex., via El Paso, Tex., March 25.—A week ago 9,000 Federal troops held Torreon. Today General Villa and General Benavides, his chief officer, breakfasted in one of the city's cafes; and the Federals are scattered to the hills.

Half of Torreon is in flame. Seven hundred Federal dead lie in the streets. A thousand Federal wounded are prisoners. And Torreon—the gateway to the South—is Villa's.

FEDERAL FORCES SHATTERED.

The Federal forces — the main body — are shattered. Save for scattered corps, the way to Mexico City lies open. And Villa's victory was won at a cost of less than a thousand dead and wounded.

Twelve thousand were the rebels under Villa who attacked the city. Fighting began a hundred miles to the north, where the Federal outposts were driven from the gorge in which they had hoped to trap Villa's army. Steadily, carefully, Villa pressed southward, taking always the easiest way, never sacrificing strategical advantage to mere bravado, and winning a reputation as the ablest soldier in Mexico.

ULTIMATE SUCCESS ASSURED.

Villa's ultimate success is assured, not so much by his great victory here, as by the widespread defections in the Federal ranks. Again and again squads of soldiers, pressed into service by the Huerta government, broke away and fled to the rebel ranks, there to take up arms against their former comrades.

The fear of these defections hampered the Huerta officers, for they were obliged to keep their men massed and in control—while the rebels fought in open order. The result—rebel cannon and machine guns mowed great swaths through

DOCTOR TAKES ON SPEECH OF FRANK TANNENBAUM

NEW YORK, March 25.—An extract from a speech of Frank Tannenbaum, in which he threatened that the Industrial Workers of the World would make the streets run red with blood was read today at the trial of the young agitator, who is charged with leading an army of unemployed into St. Alphonsus Roman Catholic Church and inciting riot. In his testimony Tannenbaum had declared that the religious persecutions of the time of the French revolution were re-

TORREON IN FLAMES; VILLA IS NOW MASTER OF NORTHERN MEXICO

In Torreon, Villa found cholera abroad. Instantly he gave the order to burn every building where there was a possibility of infection, and cuartels, hotels and private houses where Federal soldiers had been quartered were put to the torch. Almost every blazing house gave up its little group of refugees who had hid there in the hope of escaping capture or death at the hands of Villa's men.

And today, Monterey, Saltillo, Tampico and Mazatlan lie at Villa's mercy. The great oil fields of the coast—the very heart of Mexico's wealth—is ready to his hand.

Villa captured Torreon by a flank movement, executed with the utmost skill, and under his personal leadership. The rebel general was under fire throughout the fighting, and only once withdrew to send a dispatch to Carranza, waiting in the north for news. Returning, Villa found the attack lagging. With a great cry—"Great God, is this the way you fight when I am away," he spurred to the front—and the men followed.

The capture of Torreon followed an all day battle, and was accomplished just before dusk last night. At sundrise yesterday, this was the situation:

HELD GOMEZ PALACIO.

General Villa held Gomez Palacio. General Tomas Urbinas lay well along the Rio de Nazas to the west. General Benavides with his Zaragosa brigade—recruited from the country about Torreon and the finest fighting corps in the rebel army—lay to the east.

The Federals held Torreon, and their artillery lay along the skirts of the town and upon the low mountains to the west of Torreon.

In final terms, General Villa was the backfield, Benavides the left end and Urbinas the right end of the rebel team; while the Federal formation was more compact. The Federals had concentrated their attention on repelling a direct attack, and such an attack was the one to be expected from Villa. For through the centre ran the railroad line, with the only practicable bridge across the river. To the east of Torreon the river had been turned into the irrigation canals and the entire watermarsh impeded any advance, while to the west of Torreon the river was wider and deeper, and was supposed impassable.

USES DOUBLE PASS.

Villa, like a good quarterback, decided on a double pass. The ball went to Urbinas, and away to the west that general threw his troops at the river and fought to cross. The Federals, believing Villa's own wing sufficiently defended by the wide marsh, threw troops and artillery to meet Urbinas' attack.

Meanwhile Villa's artillery, under General Angeles, had defiled among the marshes to the east, and now commanded the stretch of marsh and the eastern fringe of Torreon. Villa gave another order and instantly Urbinas withdrew his attack. Then the whole rebel force shifted to the east at double quick time. Urbinas came to defend the railroad to prevent a flank movement. Villa combined with Benavides at the east and almost the entire strength of the rebel army threw itself at the marsh land.

VILLA LED TROOPS.

Villa "carried the ball." He led his troops, was again and again urged to withdraw from the firing line, but always refused. The cannon of Angeles from the mountains splintered houses and wrecked trenches on the eastern edge of Torreon. And the rebel horde set the shallow river boiling and surging with the rush of their charge.

The Federal artillery poured death among them. Here was the heavy rebel loss, and down the sluggish current of the Nazas went the bodies of men and horses, drifting away from the thunder of the battle. Behind—the rebels still plunged on.

IN MUD TO HUBS.

The rebel gun wagons went into the mud and grass to their hubs. Panting, grunting men tugged at the traces with the horses and mules. Other straining men hewed apart the barbed wire entanglements which laced the marsh, and each new irrigation canal, a hundred men in a matter of minutes shoved dirt and grass and splintered timber into the canal and made shallow water for the gun wagons' passage. The Federal machine guns and cannon sent a decimating hail of missiles among them. The rebels grunted and tugged at the gun traces, panted and strove through the muck—and pressed on.

Then the bombardment from Angeles' cannon began to show its effects. The Federal batteries, in confusion, were forced to turn from the advancing rebels and reply to the rebel guns.

There came a lull. Villa appeared again, and with him, along the railroad line to Monterey, came a relief train. The rebels had been on half rations for two days. Only the example of their generals kept them strong-hearted. The relief train brought hot coffee, bisquits and meat. Under the Federal fire, Villa ordered the advance halted, and he himself helped serve out the viands to the hungry, tired-out soldiers. It was then a little before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

ADVANCE RENEWED.

In fifteen minutes the advance was renewed. By this time disaffection among the Federals began to show. Occasionally squads of Federal conscripts dashed to the shelter of the rebel lines. The Federal officers were shooting down their own men to check the mutiny.

At about half past three in the afternoon the rebels reached firm ground on the south bank of the river. There they rallied, waited, then in a sweeping, yelling charge of riotously fighting men, they rained down upon the 'dobe buildings that skirt Torreon—and in the shelter of these buildings found themselves at last within Torreon's confines.

The Federal artillery still spouted death from strongholds in the city's centre. The rebel machine guns began to work, and the sharpshooting rebel troops of the Zaragosas for an hour picked off man after man about the Federal guns.

BATTERIES SILENCED.

From that time on the battle resolved itself into a series of victories. One Federal battery after another was silenced. As the rebel advance swept up to each in turn, it was swung around and poured shrapnel after the fleeing Federals.

Villa and Benavides, leading two wings of the main rebel advance, called greetings to each other, and the laughing soldiers, going about their work of death with grins twisting their strained faces, cheered the generals and jeered the fleeing Huertistas.

Benavides had wired Villa two days before: "I will invite you to breakfast with me in the finest cafe in Torreon on Wednesday morning without fail." The words of this message rang come abroad among the army.

Once when a lull brought the two generals together, Villa cried:

"I'll have breakfast with you, as you said, tomorrow," and the men knew what he meant—and howled with glee.

BUILDINGS ARE FIRED.

Torreon was captured almost house by house. As the rebels poured in, stumbling over the dead who littered the streets, they were met by desultory fire from every building. Federal troops were hidden there. Benavides cried: "Fire every building as you advance." The order was obeyed, and the advancing flames and the advancing rebels together drove the Federals back.

General Velasco made a stubborn defence of the town. But his soldiers could not stand up against the attack of the rebels. The sight of their own comrades deserting; the dread of the hail of death and agony from their own guns, and the advance of the flames among the crowded buildings were too much for their nerves. They were already in a panic before the battle started, at word that rebels was abroad in the town. When Torreon was half taken, the retreat became a rout.

IGNORES THE WOUNDED.

There was little attempt among the Federals to care for their wounded, either at Gomez Palacio, or in Torreon. The rebels in their advance ignored the wounded men, but after the fighting was over they were made prisoners. Those worst wounded were sent away with the rebel wounded on trains for the north. Villa carries no hospital equipment with him. In fact, he has moved south so swiftly that even his commissary has failed to keep pace with his advance.

There was only one drawback to Villa's victory. He captured Torreon; but his attempt to swing a force around the city and cut the railroad line to the south was a failure. Thus the Federal forces were able to entrain and escape or to flee overland through the mountains. The Huerta army is disorganized and worthless as an effective fighting force, but it is not annihilated, and a military genius might bring together the shattered remnants again.

Villa is not expected to push southward immediately. He will establish himself in Torreon, bringing provisions from the north and making good his conquest. The rebel general has swept every Federal force of any size out of the north of Mexico. He has driven them across the border to the United States or south toward Mexico City.

And now, though he is 600 miles from Mexico City, there is no effective opposition in sight to his advance.

The battle of Torreon is the greatest rebel victory of the war. And the Federal loss exceeded any previous figures.

"Those who have spent the evening dancing sleep better and eat better than those who have been shut up in a stuffy room for hours. Dancing is play and particularly good for the nerves because of the soothing effect of the rythm."

War Element Leads in Japan; Plans to Push U. S. Demands

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The fall of the Japanese Cabinet is a blow at the policy of Secretary of State Bryan and Foreign Minister Makino of Japan as to the California alien land law and Japanese immigration to Mexico.

The best posted diplomats here expect there will be a new deal in Japanese politics which will bring the anti-American elements in power and force a settlement with the United States on Japan's protest now before the State Department. It will also bring to the top the question of the dominance of Japan in Mexico.

It is understood that the war element overthrew the Japanese Cabinet. Under the new regime, it is thought there will be a radical and immediate strengthening of the Japanese naval construction program.

NURSE IN LOVE AFFAIR TRIES TO DIE BY POISON

Deserted, she thought, by her sweetheart, a Gold Coast student at Harvard, with whom she is said to have quarreled, Miss Alice Kellerman, a trained nurse, swallowed poison in her flat at No. 174 Hemenway street, Back Bay, and is today in a serious condition at the Psycopathic Hospital.

It was her fourth attempt at suicide in as many weeks. The police may have her examined as to her sanity.

William Kelland, the janitor, was passing the door of her apartment when he heard screams. He let himself in with a pass key and found Miss Kellerman on the bed, fully dressed and apparently in great pain.

"I have taken poison, William," she said. "I guess I am done for this time and perhaps it is just as well I am tired of everything."

Kelland asked the telephone operator to call a physician and a few minutes later Dr. Henry C. Marble of No. 216 Newbury street arrived. He administered emetics and probably saved Miss Kellerman's life. The young woman partially revived and when Dr. Marble reached for the telephone to call an ambulance she is said to have snatched the instrument from his hand.

The physician overpowered the girl while Kelland summoned the police who over the phone in the lower hallway.

Miss Kellerman is twenty-five years old, talented and attractive. She has been living alone in the Hemenway street apartment house and is said to have come to Boston to be near her sweetheart.

A few weeks ago Miss Kellerman and the young man are said to have disagreed and she threatened to end her suicide. Twice she failed. Last Wednesday evening Janitor Kelland found her unconscious from poison, but she had swallowed too much. On that day also is said to have quarreled with the Harvard man and he is reported to have gone to New York.

street Commissioner James A. Gallivan, winner of a sweeping victory in the Democratic primaries for the Twelfth Congressional District, outlined to the AMERICAN today his platform for the field of national politics, which he is fated to enter as the Democratic nomination in this district means election the present street commissioner is now being hailed as "Congressman" by his enthusiastic supporters.

The Democratic nominee is for the passage for American shipping through the Panama Canal, for uniform labor laws, for federal aid against tuberculosis and particularly for the best interests of his district, city, State and party.

Commissioner Gallivan led his statement of principles with a vigorous enunciation of his ideas on the Panama Canal issue, saying:

"As far back as a month ago I made public statement opposing this attempt to repeal the toll exemption clause for American shipping.

WILL STAND BY PLEDGE.

"I I get to Washington I shall stand by the Baltimore convention plank, which favored giving American coastwise shipping free passage through the Panama Canal. Millions of American money have been spent in building that canal and there is no good reason, even though the British Ambassador seems to have persuaded President Wilson to the contrary, why American ships should not be given the preference to which the last Congress believed they were entitled. I shall stand with Oscar Underwood and other clear-thinking Democrats of the country in sustaining that plank in the platform."

Concluding his own platform, Commissioner Gallivan said:

"I believe in a national—or in a uniform federal labor law. Our own Commonwealth has been so progressive and has become so enlightened in its treatment of women and children in factories, that its labor legislation—which does not appeal to the manufacturers—has, it is said, been driving out of the state many industrial concerns which have sought an abiding place in other States where labor legislation does not properly consider the unfortunate women and children who must work to keep body and soul together. Uniform federal labor law would remedy this.

URGES NATIONAL SANATORIUM.

"Next, I think, as a man who fathered the first free State hospital for consumptives and who has always been active in the movement to stop the spread of the Great White Plague, that the federal government must set aside millions if necessary to establish national sanatoriums for the treatment and care of tubercular patients in different sections of the country.

"I want, so far as the Twelfth District is concerned, to see the waterfronts of both South Boston and Dorchester taken advantage of for the industrial development, which is coming to these sections of Boston, may be of the very greatest benefit possible."

The commissioner pledges himself to be ever mindful of the "folks at home," as they say. He said earnestly, in ending his statement of principles:

"I shall do, at all times, working for the people of my district, my city, my State and my party. But I also shall labor, night and day, to contribute in whatever measure it may be my privilege, to the health, happiness and hopefulness of all the people, of whatever political faith or creed or color."

Depew, N. Y., Iron Plant Is Fired Upon by Strikers

DEPEW, N. Y., March 25.—Although this town was under martial law today violent disorder is feared in the Gould Coupler Works strike. Armed strikers crept up to the gate entrance of the Erie Railroad to the plant at daybreak and fired a volley of shots at the factory buildings.

Guards were stationed about the closed saloons. It is reported that the strikers secured one hundred more rifles formerly the property of the Depew Military Association which recently disbanded.

Keep School Children's Heads Clean

Don't pull their hair out with a fine comb or nurse it with powerful drugs. Be practical and sure, this simple but sure remedy, which is recommended by boards of health and authorities, should be followed by every mother of children: Apply a few drops of Parisian Sage to the scalp and rub in vigorously, repeating once or twice weekly, especially for this purpose, which can be obtained at any drug store. This will form a thick lather, which should be allowed to remain fifteen minutes or more—the last easier it should remain over night—rinse out with water, rub dry and comb the hair. Following this course every week will keep the hair perfectly clear of all nits, dandruff germs, dirt, and it will grow rich or no-it fine, tumbling. It will look it soft and fluffy. Parisian Sage is not sold by druggists generally, but any druggist can get it for you from his jobber. Be sure you get the genuine. Mothers should insist on this. Do not take any substitute, as Fitzgerald Bros. Co., Collingwood, O., will send you this soap by mail on receipt of price.

FROG LEGS CAUSE OF CAILLAUX TRAGEDY

PARIS, March 25.—"The role of women should be merely to rejoice with the warriors after the battle."

Such was Gabriel d'Annunzio's cynical commentary today when apropos of Mme. Caillaux, he discussed the part women play in French politics.

For the first time the Italian poet declared himself a woman hater.

"Woman's place today should be exactly that which she occupied in the Middle Ages," he said, "that of sitting at home with her spinning wheel. Not for her the labyrinthic intrigues of politicians or the hurly burly of public life. When she meddles therein it is only to spoil."

"WHEN WOMAN MEDDLES."

D'Annunzio refused to discuss the personages involved in the Figaro tragedy, but said:

"Generalizing, I can state that society women are too wide a swath in affairs in Latin countries. They think their superior education qualifies them to dictate or to advise political party leaders. But remove that superficial veneer and you find them just the same creatures as the women of the darkest ages.

"Men with centuries of experience in the struggle for political power can be left to supply enough of the passionate element for public life.

"When women begin to meddle in politics it becomes melodrama. They do not possess the mental poise to fit them for the bitter fight for the power to govern. The littlest things upset a woman's balance."

IRRITATED BY LUNCHEON.

As a matter of fact, Mme. Caillaux went on her desperate errand last week after lunching on badly cooked frogs legs and macaroni au gratin. She told the examining magistrate, M. Bouchard, the failure of her lunch irritated her. Her evidence on this point indicated how slight things will disturb the delicate nervous system of a society woman and cause her to lose her perfect mental balance.

Frogs legs and macaroni au gratin form an essential portion of Mme. Caillaux special dietary, and her cook, being under notice to quit, her luncheon suffered accordingly.

A few hours later, Mme. Caillaux emptied a six-chamber revolver on Gaston Calmette. Ever since she has been in St. Lazare Jail. She has ordered daily frogs' legs and macaroni. They are cooked well, so she remains perfectly equable and self-possessed.

Meanwhile, other society women, who with Mme. Caillaux have interested themselves in political affairs, have hurriedly retreated to the background and are doing their utmost to keep out of the limelight. Some have gone to the country, others have closed their doors to visitors and disconnected their telephones.

MME. CAILLAUX TELLS COURT HOW SHE KILLED EDITOR

PARIS, March 25.—Declaring she had bought the weapon with which she killed M. Calmette, editor of the Figaro, not to commit murder but to protect herself, Mme. Henriette Caillaux told the examining judges the story of her crime.

She carefully reiterated the declaration, made soon after her arrest, that, even when she visited the Figaro office, she did not mean to kill her husband's arch-enemy. She said:

"I never intended to kill M. Calmette. I only wanted to give him warning."

She explained that she feared her husband might commit some act of violence against the editor. When she started for the Figaro office, she left a note for M. Caillaux, reading:

"France and the republic have need of you. I do not want you to sacrifice yourself."

TOOK CAREFUL AIM.

She told her cordial greeting by the editor when she reached the Figaro office.

"No doubt you know the object of my visit?" she had said to the editor.

"No," replied M. Calmette. "Won't you sit down?" He then lighted a cigar and placed it near the desk.

"Frantic at finding myself in semi-obscurity facing the man who had maligned my husband, my presence in the office known to all," Mme. Caillaux told the court. "I drew the revolver and, taking careful aim, fired low."

"Yes, indeed," interrupted M. Bouchard, the examining magistrate, "I observed that two bullets lodged in the base of the book case. But how do you explain the wound in the breast of M. Calmette, who was behind the desk?"

"I do not know; I continued to fire without noticing," said the witness.

"Are we to suppose that the weapon followed M. Calmette around, in his efforts to escape?" asked the magistrate.

To this Mme. Caillaux said nothing.

When she entered the court, M. Boucard bade her:

"Give us an account of what you did on Monday, the day you shot Gaston Calmette."

Mme. Caillaux replied:

"Shortly after 8 o'clock in the morning I received Bernard Monier, chief judge of the Civil Tribunal of the Seine, with whom I had spoken, as I have previously told you, on the question whether any legal means existed to prevent the publication of my private letters in the Figaro.

"Judge Monier was unable to make any suggestion as to how the Figaro could be prevented from publishing other private letters. He left my house at half past 8.

"I telephoned to my hairdresser to come to the house at 7 p. m. I was manicured and then visited my dentist. Afterward I drove to the Ministry of Finance and told my husband what Judge Monier had said.

"My husband was furious. He exclaimed: 'Then there is nothing else for me to do except to go and break his neck.'

"I did not doubt at that moment that my husband intended to commit some act of extreme violence.

"In this state of mind we took our lunch together at home. The meal was a wretched one. Our cook, who was to leave us that very evening, had neglected her work. I could eat nothing, as I was accustomed to a severe diet."

Mme. Caillaux recollected keenly the annoyances she had suffered that day. She went on:

"Although we both had talked a good deal about the bad quality of the luncheon, I was in reality becoming more and more preoccupied with the nervousness of my husband. My fright over my husband's words grew and I felt the imperious necessity of taking some steps against the editor of the Figaro.

FEARED HUSBAND'S ANGER.

"Then more than ever I became obsessed with the idea to go and see Gaston Calmette. A terrible fear clutched me lest my husband, who was a remarkably good shot, should kill M. Calmette. In my delirium I already pictured to my mind the figure of my husband on the prisoner's bench, and I was already confronted with the consequences of such a frightful tragedy. What added to my anguish was a deep personal conscientious scruple, for there was no use concealing from myself that I should be the involuntary cause of this terrifying drama."

Madame Caillaux told of her movements the afternoon of the crime, among them being her visit to a gunsmith to buy a revolver.

M. Boucard interrupted to ask if at this moment she had planned to kill M. Calmette.

"Not entirely," replied Mme. Caillaux. "The idea then began only to take root."

Mme. Caillaux declared she had purchased a revolver, after refusing one in which the trigger worked too hard, for protection on nights in the country during the electoral campaign of her husband, whom she intended to accompany.

The widow of the famous French artist gave important testimony at the preliminary hearing accorded Mme. Caillaux, who killed Editor Calmette of the Paris Figaro.

SUFFRAGISTS TO PARADE IF VOTES FOR WOMEN WIN

Boston women suffragists will march in force to the State House tomorrow to see the House pass the woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution. Tomorrow they will adjourn to Copley square for the suffrage parade. Tomorrow evening they will celebrate the victory by a general jollification, with suffragist leaders present from all over the State.

The parade and evening celebration are based, of course, upon the assumption that the House will give the necessary two-thirds majority to the equal suffrage amendment. The women say the House is bound to do this. Didn't the Senate pass it with only three votes against the measure? The women feel that the tide is turning and that victory is within their grasp, so far as the Legislature goes, after fifty years of fighting in Massachusetts.

The women are equally sure that, when the suffrage bill comes before him for signature, Governor Walsh will take his pen in hand and grant the vote to the women of Mass. he has such profound respect, even though he has failed so far to give one of them his honored name.

NEW YORK, March 25.—William Parents of Lewiston, Me., who is on his honeymoon, paid a $10 fine here as the result of a fight on a ferry boat.

"Willie, that man across the way winked at me."

Then, approaching the man, the husband said:

"Why have you been looking at my wife? Why have you winked at her?"

"I beg your pardon," replied the man. "I have looked at her, but I didn't wink at her."

"You lie," shouted the bridegroom. "She told me you winked at her, and I saw you wink."

He let drive with left and right and knocked the supposed winker to the floor.

Patrolman Lawry ran up and with difficulty subdued the irate bridegroom.

The man who had been struck said he was Ernest Markerts of No. 437 East 59th street. He asked that Parents be arrested.

SENATE GETS PAGE VERSION OF HIS SPEECH

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The full text of the speech on the Panama Canal and the Monroe Doctrine delivered by Walter Hines Page, American Ambassador to Great Britain, in London on March 11, was transmitted to the Senate today by Secretary of State Bryan. The remarks of the Ambassador were before the Association of Chambers of Commerce and caused congressional criticism of the Ambassador, resulting in the adoption of a resolution by the Senate calling for a complete transcript of his address.

Ambassador Page said, according to his own version:

"I will not say that we constructed the Panama Canal even for you. For I am speaking with great frankness and with entire confidence. We built it for reasons of our own. But I will say that it adds to the pleasure of building that great work that you will profit by it. You will profit most of all, for you have the greatest carrying trade."

SAME REGARDING TARIFF.

"I can not say that one thing about the recent lowering of our tariff. We did not lower it in order to please you. It was for purposes that we considered economically sound for ourselves. Nevertheless we added to the pleasure of doing that to reflect that thereby we should have more trade with you.

"Concerning the recent message of the President I take it upon myself on my own responsibility to say this. He delivered that message not to please you, but to express the true sentiment and self respect of the American nation. As I interpret it, his was the voice of the people. Nevertheless it adds to the pleasure of hearing that voice to know that it does please you.

"In discussing the investment of European capital in American and South American countries, retiring Ambassador Page said anent the Monroe doctrine:

REFERENCE TO DOCTRINE.

"You may be assured that it is none of the business of the United States to put any let or hindrance upon any legitimate investments of yours anywhere in the world, and they most heartily welcome your investments in any part of the Americas, provided only you do not make them so that you may possibly take the country with them.

"The Monroe doctrine meant when it was first formulated that the United States would object to any European country taking more land in the New World.

"In those days the only way that a foreign government could gain land was literally to go and take it. Now we have more refined methods of annexation and there are other ways to take it. That is the only protest that the United States ever whispered. You will, I am sure, understand why the United States prefers that no land in the New World should be acquired in these new subtle ways."

Urge Ocean Mail Service for Boston

Urging a transatlantic mail service out of Boston, Congressman Murray told Postmaster-General Burleson at Washington that Boston is 190 nautical miles nearer Europe than New York, and that Boston's increasing volume of business merits this city having its own foreign mail service. The Postmaster-General promised to look into the matter.

FACTORY GIRL'S BROTHER HELPED PLANT ROMANCE

Mrs. Everette D. Plant, the former Miss Phyllis M. Maguire of Roxbury, bride of the ex-shoe magnate's nephew in secret wedding.

The romance of young Everette D. Plant, nephew of Thomas G. Plant, who on Monday married a girl he had met when she worked in the office of the Plant factory, was fostered by the girl's elder brother, Francis Maguire, it developed today.

When young Plant and the girl first became attached, and when William F. Plant, the boy's millionaire father, told Everette he'd best show his worth before thinking of marriage, Francis, who was a clerk in a Washington hotel, found Everette a place in the same establishment.

The two worked and chummed together for six months, then Everette felt ready to venture marriage, and it was Francis who came back to Roxbury and took his sister on to Washington. After the marriage Monday, the two went to live in a Fourteenth street apartment.

Y., March 25.—When more than 400 Methodist Episcopal ministers representing the New York conference met here today in the sixty-sixth annual session, it seemed certain that the conference would adopt the resolution calling for a minimum salary of $800 a year for bachelor ministers and $1,000 for married ministers, together with free rent of the parsonage.

T Wharf Cleans Up for Moving Day

This was junk men's day at T wharf, preparatory to moving the industry to the New Fish Pier on the South Boston side. The Boston Fish Bureau and the fish dealers along the historic wharf cleaned house today, turning over to junk men the accumulated litter of thirty odd years. BACONS LEASE SIEGEL STORE FOR 20 YEARS

W. & A. Bacon Co, the Massachusetts corporation recently organized to take over the merchandise and store of the Henry Siegel Co., on Washington street, Boston, proposes to lease the premises for the next score of years at an aggregate rent of some $5,875,000.

To this end Charles E. Cotting and Charles Francis Adams, 2d, as trustees, called the shareholders of the Department Store Trust together yesterday and a twenty-year lease to the new company on the following rental terms was voted:

For the first five years, $250,000; second five years, $275,000; third five years, $300,000; and last five years, $350,000. The lessor has reserved an interesting option "at the end of any fiscal year to take in lieu of rent 5 per cent. of the gross business of the lessee."

At a hearing in the Siegel receivership proceedings, counsel for the Department Store Trust stated that its property had been under lease to the Henry Siegel Company at a rental of $202,000 per annum, payable monthly, and that four months' rent remained unpaid. They further asserted that the land cost $4,073,000 and the building $2,500,000, a total of $6,573,000.

No Candidate for Milford Post Office

The Postoffice Department at Washington has announced that no "prospective candidate" has yet been selected for the Milford postmastership. PELLETIER MAY GET $3,000 FOR SIEGEL LOSERS

District Attorney Pelletier thinks that he may be able to get back about $3,000 in deposits put into the Siegel bank in Boston on the last two days of the bank's business. This money was deposited on December 29 and 30.

The standing of the depositors just previous to the failure has not yet been determined and their chances for getting anything back but a small dividend is slight. But the people who put in their money on the last two days may get every penny back.

Mr. Pelletier has succeeded in pinning down all this money, he thinks. He sent letters today to these depositors, informing them that their money will be protected as far as he will be able to care for them. He will attempt to get some of the $100,000 bond for them, if possible.

The amount involved in the Boston bond was $75,000 and two and a half million in New York. It is claimed that the $100,000 bond in New York will be adjudicated for the New York depositors only. New York courts have been asked to decide on this matter, and a ruling is soon expected.

District Attorney Whitman of New York sent an auditor to Boston today, who is going over the books of the Siegel stores and the bank with Mr. Pelletier's auditor. Receiver Henry Melville, for the New York and Boston stores and banks, has asked the courts to order the New York bond be paid over to him. If the courts rule in his favor, Mr. Pelletier feels that he will be able to secure $3,000 more for the local depositors.

It now appears that much of the New York money went into the Boston store, which is said to have been a heavy loser from the very beginning.

Drop Cases Against Le Blanc Witnesses

District Attorney William J. Corcoran at East Cambridge, today, noprossed the cases of Lawrence F. "Larry") Smith, who was accused of attempted subornation of perjury and of James E. Dumont, who was accused of perjury in the Hattie Le Blanc trial. Smith was the detective who worked up Hattie's defence evidence and Dumont was a witness. Both were indicted January 3, 1912.

Goethals Bill Is Beaten; Credit to the N. Y. American

ALBANY, March 25.—The Goethals police bill was defeated in the Assembly by a vote of 84 to 49.

Revolt against depriving New York policemen of appeal to the courts caused members from forty-one of the fifty-nine metropolitan districts to vote against the measure.

It was far the most decisive defeat administered to any legislative measure of importance in recent years.

"We want no such law in the hands of the little family gathering that makes up the Mayor's cabinet. All honor and thanks to the New York American for the stand it has taken," said B. F. Moore, Progressive, speaking on the floor. The American was praised by several speakers.

Vice-President Mixed on Dates

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Vice-President Marshall is sorely afflicted. When a North Carolina delegation, introduced by Senator Overman, asked him to go to Charlotte May 20 and speak he could not find his "date" book.

"I will give you my answer tomorrow or next day," said Mr. Marshall. "I have no help today. My secretary has the measles, my messenger has on a bridal tour, my stenographer has the measles, my messenger has German measles and Mrs. Marshall's maid has undergone an operation for appendicitis."

FLORENCE NASH STUDIES WOMEN PRISONERS HERE

'Aggie Lynch' Finds Graciousness the Keynote of Those in Charge.

Florence Nash, whose work as Aggie Lynch, the little blacksmither in "Within the Law," at the Majestic Theatre has made her one of the most deliciously amusing characters in that play, visited the women's detention quarters at the city jail the other day. Her impressions of the place, its inmates and its keepers not only make interesting reading, but shows that Miss Nash is steeped with a keen knowledge of human nature. The following was written for the AMERICAN by Miss Nash.

By FLORENCE NASH.

"Now you must go down stairs and see where we keep our women prisoners."

While I was waiting for the matron I thought of Oscar Wilde:

"I know not whether laws be right,
Or whether laws be wrong;
All that we know who lie in goal,
Is that the wall is strong;
And that each day is like a year,
A year whose days are long."

And I hated the idea of having to go into such an oppressive place. I was roused from reverie by a pleasant voice saying, "I'm Mrs. Barretta. If you'll come with me, I'll show you the jail."

I followed her and noticed that she had the soft, quiet manner of a very efficient nurse, or of a sister of charity. Then a door opened and we were actually in jail. We entered from the courtroom, and my first impression was as dark and unpleasant as it ever is during matinee. But there were no occupants on that tier and, as we went down stairs it grew lighter, though the air seemed hot and unventilated.

"Don't you have any fresh air here?"

"Yes, but the poor dears were afraid of the thunder and asked us to close the windows. It makes it hot, but you might as well humor the poor things here."

I'm ashamed to say that the speech sounded hypocritical to me, because I was still prejudiced against any one serving as a jailer.

CLEAN AS KITCHEN.

As we reached the foot of the stairs, the first thing I saw was a lot of highly polished brass and a jolly-looking Irish woman busy at some task. The place looked as cheerful as the cleanest sort of kitchen and had an undefinable "homey" air about it, especially when Mrs. Barretta introduced me to Biddy Canfield, who explained that it was impossible to keep the place clean.

Then they showed it to me. Each unoccupied cell has newspapers over the beds to keep them from getting dusty, the floors were spotless, and the roller towels clean. (However, I don't approve of roller towels, even for prisoners.)

Just as they were showing me a padded cell, I heard people singing a good rollicking song with a wonderful alto. It came from one of the cells and ended in a burst of laughter, and it was such spontaneous, infectious laughter that one began to smile, and Mrs. Barretta said: "That's a jolly crowd."

It was the morning after a holiday, so I imagined that they were light-hearted because they expected to be discharged for some slight breach of the law, but no, they had all been sentenced to four or five months.

We stopped in front of another cell. "One of these women is awaiting trial and the other is waiting to be sent to Sherburn."

"I beg your pardon, I'm waiting for bail."

"Well, good luck, deary. I hope you get it soon."

I was surprised at that answer from Mrs. Barretta, for I had seen the woman sentenced, but she explained that "they sometimes pretend to their cell-mates."

"Can't they have a cell alone?"

"Certainly, if they want it, but they don't. They get lonesome and afraid if they're alone."

TRIES ON "WRISTERS."

Just then there was a knock at the door and Mrs. Canfield came in with a steaming pot of coffee.

"Who ordered this?"

"Number 12."

"Here it is, your coffee, ten cents, please. You gave me a dollar, remember." She came back immediately and counted out ninety cents to the prisoner. I should like to see a hotel waiter one got such cheerful service, even for a tip. They explained that only tea was served and they allowed them to send for coffee.

"What do you do for them when they're bad?"

"We put on a belt and wristers."

There at last was something that sounded severe, so I asked could I try them. They strapped broad leather bands about the insides on my wrists, put a strip through them and belted the strap around my waist. The device wasn't cruel, for while it held me from violent action, it didn't cramp. And I could lean over and scratch my nose. I mention that last fact because the matron did. Prisoners evidently have itchy noses.

One of the girls asked if she could come out again and wash her hands. The permission was given and graciously. In fact, graciousness was the keynote of the jail, and I understood when I met Mrs. White, the chief matron. Mrs. White's manner reminds one of the description of the early Christians who, like herself, were good, but didn't criticize.

Mrs. White said to me "If one hasn't the appetites of these poor people, one cannot understand their struggles, and if one has conquered, one can realize the difficulty of doing so. These people are not bad, they're merely badly equipped for a hard struggle."

But Boston is to be congratulated in being so well equipped to run its women's jail on humane principles.

Humane Treatment a Feature. Even the 'Wristers' Are Comfortable.

Saw Mrs. Hevenor as 'September Morn'

NEW YORK, March 25.—Did Grace Dimon Hevenor, wife of Harvey H. Hevenor, a wealthy lumber merchant, parade before the windows of her room as "September Morn"? is one of the questions a jury will consider today when deliberating upon the evidence produced against Mrs. Hevenor. The superintendent of an apartment house at One Hundred and Twelfth street testified that he had seen Mrs. Hevenor come unattired to the window. He also said she had thrown bottles from the fourth floor window to the Street.

Lodging Houses Must Get Right Names

Lodging houses in Boston will have to secure the correct names of those seeking rooms, according to orders issued today by the police. This order is the result of an investigation by Captain Driscoll of the East Dedham street station, which he conducted as a result of the Arcadia fire. The police claim the lodging houses have been accustomed to let any old name be slapped on the register so long as they got the roomer's money.

SIMPLE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need); apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.

SON'S INCOME $600 A YEAR SAYS BELMONT

NEW YORK, March 24.—Testifying that his son's income was about $600 a year, August Belmont went on the witness stand in the trial of the separation suit brought by Ethel Lorraine—who had passed as an actress —against young Raymond Belmont.

Hearing of the suit will be resumed Friday. August Belmont added that after Raymond married Ethel Lorraine, he cut off Raymond's allowance.

August Belmont testified as to his supervision over the estate and property of his son since the boy was born. The youth has a few dogs and ponies left. Mr. Belmont declared, but after overdue drafts and other incidentals are deducted from the estate there remains today but $14,000 in his son's name, estimating the securities on the present market value.

When the defendant was twenty-one years old, in May, 1909, his estate was worth more than $140,000, the father testified.

CRIMSON FINDS HOLLIS HARVARD RAP PART RIGHT

The Harvard Crimson, in an editorial on the speech of Senator Hollis of New Hampshire, an alumnus, in which he said the university was "hide bound," admits there was some very valuable advice in the remarks of the 1882 graduate, but objects to the manner in which he presented his ideas. The Crimson, too, calls attention to Harvard "live wires", to assail his "hide-bound" attack.

"We agree most heartily with Senator Hollis that the university should keep in close touch with the world without its gates particularly in a political way," says the Crimson. "Evidently, however, he does not realize how great the progress toward this has been.

"We would like to call his attention to a few small examples of labor in outside fields by members of the faculty—to the work of Professor Swain on engineering and transit commissions, to the work, within the last week, of Professor Bullock in connection with the State committee on preservation and taxation of forest lands, to the work of Professor Holcombe as a member of the first minimum wage board in the country, to the work of Professor Taussig, for years the recognized leader of free trade in the United States.

"These men are not the only examples of the live ways this connect Harvard with the great affairs of the country. When he accuses the undergraduate of too little interest in outside affairs, he is absolutely right.

"But Senator Hollis has not spoken in a way to make this interest, except even his good ideas as such. We seldom give much credence to a man who invveighs against any institution with a radicalism so unbalanced by a knowledge of the facts."

Major Henry L. Higginson, fellow of Harvard University, thinks Senator Hollis is in error.

"I deny that Harvard is altogether conservative or altogether reactionary," said Major Higginson with much feeling. "We have all kinds at Harvard. What are Charles Sumner, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Longfellow, Lowell, Theodore Roosevelt, Charles W. Eliot, Alfred Bushnell Hart, William James and Professor Taussig? I'd like to know if these men weren't radical!

"There is great difference of opinion among the members of Harvard College but free discussion and academic freedom are the watchword of the whole faculty.

"Taussig is almost a Socialist. James said anything he wanted to. While we may not always agree with some of the opinions of men on the faculty, they were never molested in any way and went as far and as fast as they pleased.

"What is the college to do if it does not accept endowments from wealthy persons? The professors are really our wards, and it is our duty, as well as our privilege, to provide for them. I wrote Andrew Carnegie that his foundation for pensioning college professors was the finest thing that he ever instituted.

"I wonder if Senator Hollis is ready to dig down to help finance his alma mater? Most men cannot afford to give money to colleges. And as for increasing tuition, that is going backward. Everybody of any sense is agreed that what is wanted is cheaper colleges.

Make This and Try It for Coughs

This Home-Made Remedy Has No Equal for Prompt Results.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually coupers an ordinary cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchitis. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this plan.

Making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful mixture has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SENATOR O'GORMAN IN MIGHTY PROTEST ON CANAL ACT REPEAL

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Senator O'Gorman read in the Senate the strongest argument yet made against the repeal of free tolls for American coastwise ships through the Panama canal. It was a composite message from the business men of the country, consisting of telegrams and resolutions from commercial and civic organizations in sections of the United States so widely separated as New York and San Francisco.

The tone of the solemn petitions, voicing the sentiment of the American people, made a profound impression on those senators who have to date yielded to White House importunities. The data was ordered published in the Congressional Record.

Among the messages read by Senator O'Gorman were these:

From the New Orleans Association of Commerce, the largest commercial organization in the South, is strongly opposed to the repeal of the canal toll exemptions for American coastwise vessels. We believe we voice the sentiment of thinking people of the Gulf coast ports in this matter. . . .

New Orleans is deeply concerned in the rehabilitation of the American merchant marine. We feel that this unnecessary repeal, if put into effect, would deal a staggering blow to American aspirations for a return to maritime importance.

Signed, "M. B. TREZOVANT, "General Manager."

From the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, signed by C. F. Michels, president:

"San Francisco Chamber of Commerce desires to express to you its high appreciation of your insistent stand in favor of free tolls through the Panama canal to American vessels engaged in coastwise commerce and to extend to you its hearty congratulations upon your very clear and convincing expressions in support of this measure."

RAILROADS' ADVANTAGES.

This canal was intended for and should be an untrammeled water competitor of the transcontinental railways.

Every burden placed on shipping passing through it diminishes its efficiency to that extent and aids the railroads to maintain the higher rates. Every dollar of toll placed on coastwise shipping will be paid by the people, and in addition thereto railroads will exact millions from the people in higher freight rates.

This exemption is no more a subsidy than are the millions spent every year in the improvement of the rivers and harbors of the country, and, if it is repealed, then we should repeal the law of 1884 and collect tolls on the ships using the Soo Canal and the rivers and harbors of the country. The four hundred million dollars that we have spent in building the canal is a subsidy for foreign ships. This is a fact to which the opponents of a subsidy to American shipping seem to be oblivious.

What the word of the people will be on this question which rises far above partisanship there can be no doubt. It should make itself heard before it is too late. Remember that the action demanded by the President is irrevocable. It cannot be undone.

Shall we maintain the respect of the world by a fair, firm, dignified insistence and assertion of our rights, or shall we have their secret, silent contempt by weakly yielding to the unfair and base demands of Great Britain? That is the question that the representatives of the American people are called on to answer.

U. S. HUMILIATED ON TOLL REPEAL, SAYS JONES

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington, who was rebuked by President Wilson last week for quoting on the floor of the Senate a charge that British influence had dictated the Wilson-Bryan Panama Canal policy, gave the AMERICAN the following signed statement reiterating his position in unmistakable language:

By WESLEY L. JONES

Senior United States Senator from Washington.

Never was Congress asked to reverse itself in so humiliating or dictatorial way, and never were the people of this country placed in so craven and humiliating a position as by President Wilson in his message directing the repeal of our Panama Canal legislation relating to our domestic vessels and commerce.

This legislation was not passed in the dark. It was not enacted hurriedly. It was considered for weeks; every phase of it was discussed. The honor and dignity of the nation were carefully upheld, and all of our treaty obligations were studiously guarded. We then deliberately decided we abrogated no treaty obligations and we were economically warranted in exempting coastwise ships from payment of tolls.

We were overpersuaded even in maintaining alleged treaty obligations by the requiring our ships to engage in the foreign trade to pay tolls for using our own canal. The action of Congress was almost universally approved by the people of the United States, and Mr. Wilson himself joined heartily in approving this action.

CONGRESS' SERVILE POSITION

Congress is now asked, nay, directed, to reverse itself and repeal this legislation. No reason is given, no facts warranting it are set forth. Without reason, without even cause, Congress is directed to stultify itself, and the people of the country are asked to confess to the world that they have deliberately broken a solemn treaty obligation.

Was a nation ever asked to so humiliate and dishonor itself? It is honorable to confess and repair a wrong. It is craven, cowardly and despicable to surrender your legal, equitable, moral and sovereign rights under any circumstances whatever, much less at the behest of any other nation acting solely in the interests of its transcontinental railways.

That the President should expect Congress to reverse its deliberate action is amazing. That he should expect it to do so at his direction, without any reason save that of cowardly, humiliating beyond expression. If it does so it will merit the contempt of the people whose representatives it is supposed to be.

Even if honestly opposed to the exemption when it was considered before, how can any representative of the people approve of the action urged? The honor and sovereignty of the nation are involved now, and the action urged cannot be taken without dishonor. If we do this thing now we will have and deserve the contempt and ridicule of all self-respecting people.

This canal is as much as any other inland waterway. It was built by our own money, through our own territory, and we must operate and maintain it. To deny our right to conduct it is to deny our sovereignty over our own.

RAILROADS' ADVANTAGES.

This canal was intended for and should be an untrammeled water competitor of the transcontinental railways.

Every burden placed on shipping passing through it diminishes its efficiency to that extent and aids the railroads to maintain the higher rates. Every dollar of toll placed on coastwise shipping will be paid by the people, and in addition thereto railroads will exact millions from the people in higher freight rates.

This exemption is no more a subsidy than are the millions spent every year in the improvement of the rivers and harbors of the country, and, if it is repealed, then we should repeal the law of 1884 and collect tolls on the ships using the Soo Canal and the rivers and harbors of the country. AMERICAN'S FREE SHIP RESOLUTION ADOPTED

ALBANY, March 25.—In defiance of an eleventh hour order from William Barnes, Jr., the Republican boss, to smother it, the Assembly adopted, 98 to 63, the New York American's free ship resolution.

Speaker Sweet, in fulfilment of his pledge, last night placed himself at the head of a majority who oppose President Wilson's pro-British policy and won.

A non-partisan combination, led by the Speaker and reinforced by Beveridge C. Dunlop, who introduced the resolution, succeeded in giving the Barnes machine one of the severest drubbings it has received this session.

Lieutenant-Governor Wagner and the Democratic floor leader, Mr. Murtaugh, expect that the Democratic Senate will follow the Assembly's course.

It developed that Mr. Barnes became angry when he read the Dunlop resolution in the New York American. He telephoned Sweet and Hinman from New York and said:

"Kill it! Kill it! Only Irish agitators are behind it."

Later he telephoned to his evening organ here a vicious attack on the resolution. It concluded thus:

"It is a popular thing to twist the British lion's tail and pretend to be a great patriot. But a lie is a lie. The American nation if it does not repeal the Panama Canal toll exemption will have placed itself on record as a cheat."

The answer to Barnes' demand to stifle the resolution came while it was being circulated in the Assembly chamber.

HOME RULE UPROAR IN COMMONS

Churchill incident had been quieted Colonel Seely, whose late arrival at the session had been taken as confirmation of earlier reports that he had quit the Cabinet, was questioned by members of the opposition as to the proceedings in Ulster.

Colonel Seely made a flat denial that King George had taken any initiative in the dispute involving the refusal of Ulster officers to march against their countrymen. He elaborated details of correspondence relating to the Ulster matter which the government had made public earlier in the day, and then made the formal announcement that he had tendered his resignation.

INTERRUPTS COLONEL SEELY.

Fundamentum followed Seely's announcement. Ex-Premier A. J. Balfour, a Unionist, shouted to Premier Asquith: "Is this official news?"

The Premier answered: "Colonel Seely is still a member of the cabinet."

Colonel Seely attempted to proceed with his statement, but the Premier interrupted and cried: "Colonel Seely is still a member of the cabinet."

Colonel Seely has had a distinguished career both in the fields of statesmanship and on the field of action. He was decorated for gallantry while in the service of the Imperial Yeomanry in South Africa and received a gold medal from the French government in 1891 for saving life at sea. He was appointed Secretary of War in 1912, but before that time he had served as under secretary for the colonies and under secretary of war.

COLONEL SEELY, BRITISH MINISTER OF WAR, RESIGNS

LONDON, March 25.—For the moment Home Rule and Ulster are forgotten, absorbed in what, from the English point of view, is a far greater crisis. The government surrendered on Monday to the dictation of the army. Today it has the entire body of its followers against it and their cry, strangely reminiscent of Cromwell's time is: "Are the Army and the King to rule the House of Commons?"

A telling sequel to the government's surrender was the resignation today of War Minister Colonel Seely. His resignation probably will not be accepted, because acceptance would accentuate the government's pusillanimous mishandling of the situation.

On Saturday last the government held every card. Today, thanks to the fact they truckled to influences of Buckingham Palace, including both the monarch and ladies-in-waiting, coupled with that of Lord Roberts and the exclusive army clique, they find themselves with 95 per cent. of their followers in revolt.

Opportunity came yesterday for Home Rulers to set their views of the recent crisis before Parliament and the nation and the result was a series of speeches which left the country gasping today.

John Ward, labor member was spokesman. His point was that when ordinary soldiers are driven to shed down fellow workingmen during strikes, officers, during a civil crisis, cannot be allowed to refuse to carry out their duties. Moreover, he said, if the government allows itself to be intimidated by forces during a political crisis then labor is equally entitled to force.

"If you want force, my class will fight you tomorrow. If it is to be the point of the bayonet we are ready."

He told the Tories:

"You and the Syndicalists are one. You both preach rebellion for your own purposes. If flesh and blood is to be sold cheap, we will tell the soldiers never to fire a shot against our own class.

"We trade unionists will now consider setting up our military organizations. We have 2,000,000 men. The Dublin Fusiliers were Catholics. They disliked the Boer war, but they did their duty. Why? Because they were soldiers, not officers. Do you want to break down their discipline?"

Says Husband of 60 Is Always Tangoing

NEW YORK, March 25.—Mrs. Otto Koster brought her husband into court here on a non-support charge, and declared that he—he is sixty-one years old and bald-headed—became so fond of the tango that he will not work. "He spends the evening 'tangoing,'" she told the court. "Then he practises before he goes to bed, and the first thing in the morning—what does he do? Why, he begins to tango." The judge said he would think it over.

Whaler to Hunt for Stefansson's Ship

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—Planning to search the Arctic circle for the lost Canadian exploration ship Karluk, the steam whaler Herman has left San Francisco for the Far North. Explorer Stefansson, commander of the expedition, who with those of the crew gone to the Karluk, which was fast in the ice, to hunt Crocker land, could find no trace of the vessel when they returned.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but when the kidneys weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night, when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active.

JOHN WARD'S DEFI TO KING IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

LONDON, Mah 24.—John Ward, labor member, brought half the House of Commons to their feet cheering wildly this afternoon when he shouted in stentorian tones:

"The House tust decide whether it is going to maintain the discipline of the army as a neutral force or whether the Parliament elected by the people shall absolutely without interference from the King or the army make the laws of the realm."

PARNELL PROVES REAL PROPHET; ARISTOCRATIC RULE IS TOPPLING

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

In this newspaper yesterday the prediction was made that if King George V. did not keep his hands off the acute political situation now prevailing in the British Parliament he would soon find his realm on the road to revolution.

FIRST MURMURS OF REVOLUTION.

At the moment the readers of the Boston AMERICAN were buying the evening editions, at every newsstand in New England, the first murmurings of the revolution were heard in the historic chamber of the House of Commons.

Any man who says that the scene of last night in the parliament of England was not the gravest witnessed there in more than a century is not in touch with the traditions and history of that time-honored institution justly entitled, "The Mother of Parliaments."

Not even in the days of the American revolution when Edmund Burke thundered in all his wonderful eloquence against the Tory blockheads who were steering England and its then ruler—another George, not at any time during the long Victorian era, nor the all too brief reign of Victoria's son, was such a scene enacted as that of last evening.

It will require all the tact of all the diplomats who are close to George V. to prevent this blaze going further.

The British democracy, than which there is none more determined on earth, is at this hour in a mood of ugliest anger. That burst of cheers that went up in the House of Commons when John Ward rang out the warning that the King and the army are not the rulers of England, but the people, is ringing today through every corner of the British Kingdom.

The whole system of proud and arrogant aristocratic control of the army is close to its end, after these cheers in the Commons.

For the moment there may be subsidence of this anger of the people and a truce of peace, but after the loud protests of Ramsey MacDonald, member for Leicester, and John Ward, who sits for Stoke-on-Trent, both important constituencies, there is no final stopping of the flood.

Redmond and the Irish party are right in their attitude. Sitting back quietly on their benches, saying not a word in debate, they are closely watching the battle, which is the highest triumph of Parnell's foresighted policy. Thirty years ago that great leader and statesmen told the English ministry then in power, that if they persisted in their policy of ruling Ireland by coercion, for the benefit of a group of grasping aristocratic landlords, that he would smash the whole parliamentary system of England, and make it over with the aid of an aroused British people. Parnell's words have come true.

Never again can the House of Commons go back to where it was before last night's thrilling episode. As Gladstone once said, the hands of the clock never go backwards in English politics, they always move forward on the dial.

It is now no longer a fight for home rule in Ireland. The battle is now one of the masses against the classes, and, to quote another phrase of Gladstone, the rising tide is with the people.

Nothing can now stop the passage of home rule, into the battle for Ireland's rights has now been flung the full weight of the masses of the toilers of England, Scotland and Wales. See what a combination this will mean:

FIGURES TELL STORY.

At the close of the last general election in 1910 the standing of the parties in the House of Commons was: Liberals, 272; Irish Nationalists, 84; Laborites, 42; Unionists, 272.

This standing has been a little disturbed by the bye-elections held since, but not seriously enough to shift the balance of power.

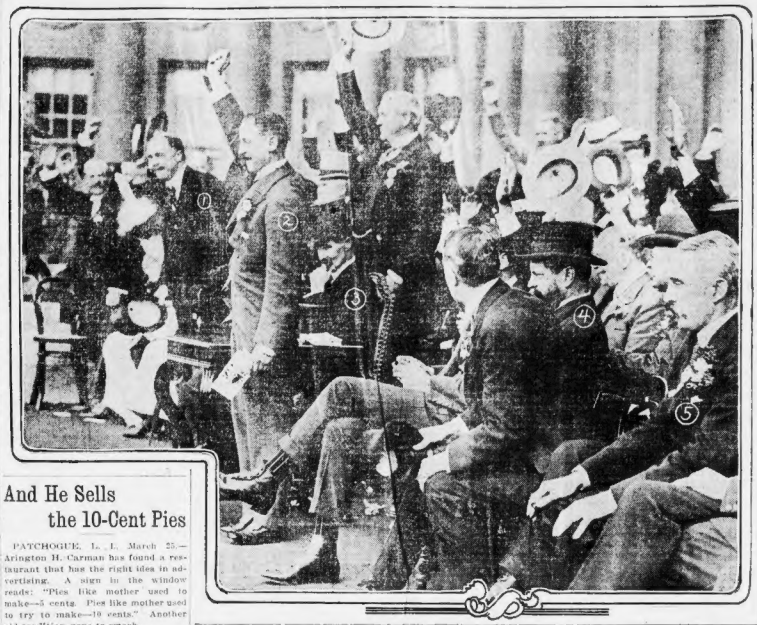
Were Redmond to say the word tomorrow, and he will not pause a second in the saying of it if the home rule cause demands such action, a coalition of an Irish Nationalist-British democracy party would come into being. And this would be disaster to both the Liberal and the Tory parties as they now exist.

KING NEEDS GOOD COUNSEL.

But there is no danger. The men who sit on the front Liberal benches know too well the spirit that is now surging throughout Great Britain. The day of Tory-aristocratic rule of the finest democracy in the world is over.

The man who now sits on the throne had better take counsel with the spirit of his father. He will do well to shake himself free from the baneful advisers who have got too close to him in these stirring days of emancipation of the people who dwell on both sides of the Irish Sea.

UNIONIST leaders at recent Anti-Home Rule meeting at Bleinheim castle, the estate of the Duke of Marlborough. Those indicated by numerals are: (1) Arthur J. Balfour, ex-premier under Conservative rule and principal speaker at the meeting, (2) the Duke of Marlborough, (3) A. Bonar Law, Tory leader in the Commons, (4) Duke of Norfolk, (5) Marquis of Hamilton, wealthy Irish landlord and Tory leader in the House of Lords.



And He Sells the 10-Cent Pies

PATCHOGUE, L. I., March 25.—Arrington H. Carman has found a restaurant that has the right idea in advertising. A sign in the window reads: "Pies like mother used to make—5 cents. Pies like mother used to try to make—10 cents." Another old tradition gone to smash.

Claims Bride of Year Is Drunkard

Harry Pickford asked Judge Raymond in the Dedham court today for a divorce from his bride of less than a year—Daisy Pickford. He said she was intoxicated three nights a week; was once found drunk on the street and was a habitual drinker—and he got his divorce.

Cleveland to Miss Big Rockefeller Tax

CLEVELAND, O., March 25.—Arrangements to collect $12,000,000 taxes from John D. Rockefeller have been postponed indefinitely. East Clevelanders are advised to prepare for a tax rate based on the assumption that Rockefeller will pay the usual $21.60 into the suburban treasury.

Burleson May Make Boston a Sea Port

WASHINGTON, March 25.—An investigation of foreign sailings from Boston has been ordered by Postmaster General Burleson with a view to granting Congressman Murray's request that sea port service out of Boston be established. Nearly all American mails for points across the Atlantic are sent from New York, because the fastest steamers sail from there.

REFUSAL OF OFFICERS TO OBEY ORDERS WAS 'JUSTIFIED' BY SEELY

LONDON, March 25.—The mutiny of a section of the officers of the British regular army in Ireland when they believed they were to be ordered to fight the Ulstermen was again today the subject of the most profound interest in Parliament and among the public.

The correspondence between the War Office and the army officers in Ireland which led to the recent wholesale resignations of commissions and reinstatements was made public today in the shape of a white paper, or official communication to the Houses of Parliament.

It can be seen from this correspondence that the War Office was informed early in December last of the possibility of resignations of officers being presented in case the political situation in regard to Ulster came to a crisis.

In consequence of this information, Colonel John Seely, the Secretary of State for War, who has resigned, interviewed the general officers in command, and explained to them that an officer of the British Army was entitled to obey orders to shoot only in case the order was a reasonable one under the circumstances.

The Secretary for War told them that no one, from a general down to a private, was entitled to use more force than was required to maintain order and the safe of life and property. He pointed out that no soldier could shelter himself from the civil law behind an order given by a superior officer, if that order was unreasonable and outrageous. He continued:

"JUSTIFIED IN REFUSAL."

"If, therefore, officers and men of the British Army have been led to believe that there is a possibility they might be called upon to take outrageous action—for instance, to massacre a demonstration of Orangemen who were causing no danger to the lives of their neighbors—had as were the effects on discipline in the Army, nevertheless, it was true that they were in the right and in law justified in a refusal to obey.

"There never has been and is not any intention, however, of giving outrageous and illegal orders to the troops.

"The law will be respected and must be obeyed. What has now to be faced is the possibility of action being required by troops in supporting the civil power in protecting lives and property when the police is unable to hold its own.

HOLD OFFICERS RESPONSIBLE.

"Attempts have been made to dissuade the rtoops for obeying lawful orders given to them acting in support of the civil power. Thehe attempts have amounted to the claim that officers and men of the army could pick and choose between lawful and reasonable orders, saying they would obey in one case and not in another."

SEVERE ITCHING AND BURNING

Of Salt Rheum on Hands, Arms and Forehead. Had to Wear Gloves at Night. Could Not Put Hands in Warm Water. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

311 Lancaster St., Portland, Me.—"About three months ago I had salt rheum on my hands so bad that I had to wear gloves at night. The breaking out first made its appearance as little blisters which seemed to be full of water which caused a terrible itching. These would break and form a yellow scab. I could not put my hands in warm water. This gradually extended over both arms and also broke out on my forehead. These places were so numerous on my body that the head of a pin could not be put between. The itching and burning were so severe that I could not sleep nights.

"I used several different so-called remedies for skin troubles, ——— Soap, ——— Soap, and several others but obtained no relief. A friend advised me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bought one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and got relief after the first application. After using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment three times a day for one week I was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Smith, July 3, 1913.

Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment 50c. are sold everywhere. A single set is often sufficient. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

You Are Paying for an Ariel Vacuum Cleaner and Not Getting It

THAT'S just it. You are cleaning house in the same old way, paying for extra help to come in and stir everything up and break things and wear yourself out into the bargain, and the price of an Ariel is gone and you haven't your Ariel.

You are paying for it again in hard weekly sweepings and dustings until the price of an Ariel is soon used up and no Ariel.

You are paying it out over and over again in the damage which dust does to your furniture, hangings and clothing, which all your old-fashioned cleaning doesn't remove and yet you have no Ariel.

And it costs but a little to become an Ariel*ist*.

You don't have to be initiated—there's nothing mysterious about becoming an Ariel*ist*. On the contrary, you can decide in your own home without anyone to bother you.

Here's the way. You can entertain an Ariel in your home overnight.

Just call up Fort Hill 3762 and say, "I want to entertain an Ariel Vacuum Cleaner overnight (practically two days) without charge"; or drop in to-day or to-morrow at the Home of Ariel, 71 Federal Street, or if you are too busy to do either, you can simply write out and send the printed invitation you will find opposite.

RICHMOND Ariel Vacuum CLEANER

Learn by experience how easily quickly and thoroughly an Ariel Vacuum Cleaner renovates your home from top to bottom, and all that it means in relaxed nerves and rested body.

Before the two days are up, you and your husband, may decide without outside pressure or influence, whether your health and comfort is worth the cost of an Ariel.

Should the decision be "No," there will be no trouble about it whatever. No Ariel is ever forced upon anyone.

But don't, for your own sake, make that decision until you have tried Ariel, for otherwise.

You can't realize what a difference it makes

POTTER BOOMED FOR VACANCY ON STATE BOARD OF ECONOMY

Appears nothing of note that Roger Wolcott of Milton, Governor Walsh's recent appointee to the State Board of Health, finds congress with the recommendations of the Governor and the State Board of Economy and Efficiency as to the advisability of a central board of control for some forty State institutions.

* * *

And that asked publicly by Chairman John N. Cole of the Economy Board, the cause resulting in a visit to the Ways and Means Committee to "criticise" some of its features. Mr. Wolcott declined because it had been "greatly amended by a subsequent report."

* * *

Seems as if the Ways and Means Committee should get that original report, quite regardless.

* * *

There appears to be a horrendous row among Warwick's adherents of strength and standing, to convince Governor Walsh that former Senator Elmer A. Potter of the Heart of the Commonwealth would make an ideal successor to Mr. Cole.

* * *

Senator Potter is, of course, a Republican. When he was a member of the Legislature on Beacon Hill he was extremely Republican Republican. Elmer was a Republican in season and out of season. He was a Republican in the cloak room and a Republican on the floor. Nobody was ever in doubt about Potter.

* * *

Even Worcester Democrats are saying a good word for this Republican, some of them being careful to keep an ace in the hole by the qualifying phrase that they are for Mr. Potter "if the appointee MUST be a Republican."

* * *

Thus doth the hardened politician find it difficult to believe that a Democratic Governor can possibly have meant what he said when he declared for "bi-partisan representation" on State boards.

* * *

John Cole's departure from Economy and Efficiency leaves that valuable Board composed of two Democrats—the State Auditor (by virtue of his office) and Francis X. Tarbell.

* * *

"Therefore, says the Governor, Mr. Cole's successor must be somebody other than a Democrat. I hold that no commission should be made up entirely of members of one party."

* * *

However, no appointment of Mr. Cole's successor was expected at today's meeting of the Governor and Council.

* * *

It is likely nobody will be named, in this connection, until the Legislature has acted on a pending bill removing the State Auditor from the Commission.

* * *

There is a feeling that the State Auditor has enough to do without being burdened with this extra responsibility. There is also a feeling that no State officer, no head of a department—Auditor, Treasurer, Tax Commissioner—should sit upon any Board which, at any time, may be called upon to investigate and criticise his own department.

* * *

So that it is by no means unlikely that on the day the Governor names "somebody other than a Democrat" to the State Board of Economy and Efficiency he will also name a Democrat to that Board, in place of the State Auditor.

* * *

The man in charge of the Income and the Governor would rather make no appointments to the State Board of Labor and Industries.

* * *

* * *

Has an idea, perhaps, that the Legislature might seriously consider selling the Labor and Industries job onto the Industrial Accident Board.

* * *

A thought which, apparently, can justly popular young Governor shares with nobody else at the State House.

* * *

* * *

One observed that the Committee on Social Welfare was to take up "Item 9" on the Report of the Special Commission on Drunkenness.

* * *

An that said item has to do with "The Sale of Liquor by Pharmacists."

* * *

How much will you wager that before the Social Welfare deals with "Item 9" somebody doesn't mention the fair No-License city of Cambridge?

* * *

Wonder if Social Welfare will also stage a "Penny Express" Day?

MRS. FLORENCE HOYT, who will receive Melrose women at suffrage banquet.

Complete Plans for Suffrage Banquet

Final arrangements for the suffrage banquet to be held at Ford Hall next Friday evening have been completed and considerable interest is manifested. The affair is given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Political Equality Union and it is expected that representatives from Brookline, Brockton, Lawrence, Jamaica Plain and Melrose will be present.

It is expected many of the delegates of the Progressive Women's clubs and various labor organizations will be present. Mrs. Florence Boyd, prominent Melrose society matron, will be the hostess of the delegates of Melrose.

* * *

Tomorrow will be Suffrage Day.

* * *

Tomorrow will be Suffrage Day.

* * *

Those interested are reminded that the House is now meeting on Thursdays at 11 a. m., to take a recess at 12:30 until 2 p. m., and that the suffrage amendment has "first place in the orders of the day."

* * *

This does not mean that the suffrage debate will begin at 11 o'clock. The first business of the day will be the reading, one by one, of about 200 matters by their titles.

* * *

So that, in all likelihood, "suffrage" may not be reached until the afternoon.

* * *

It would seem quite unnecessary to remind the House Democrats that their party has solemnly pledged its support in the Legislature to the end that the voters of Massachusetts may be asked whether or not they want to amend the Constitution by striking the word "male" from the qualifications of voters.

* * *

Democratic have NOT been pledged to vote tomorrow to Give woman the vote.

* * *

That question will not be before them.

* * *

The question is much simpler. It is whether the people shall be given a chance at the polls to say what THEY think about woman suffrage.

* * *

The Democratic Representative who personally is stoutly opposed to votes for women can quite consistently vote tomorrow to send the question to the people, reserving his right to vote at the polling place as he sees fit.

* * *

The Democratic party is NOT committed to woman suffrage. It IS solemnly committed to placing the question before the voters of the State.

* * *

Democrats who go back on these platform promises to the people should be driven out of public life in this Commonwealth. Constituencies which return pledge-breakers to the Legislature have only themselves to blame if these Representatives go wrong on important issues.

* * *

The young women and young men who have completed the full course in the Evening High School at Lawrence, and whose ambition and sacrifices might well be an inspiration to other young men and women with indulgent and self-sacrificing fathers, will tonight receive ocular and auricular proof that "manly beauty" has not departed from American public life and that oratory is not a lost art.

* * *

Introducing—in other words, my dear young friends—introducing, as the speaker of the evening, the Hon. Thomas Perryman Riley of Malden, in Levi Goubi's county, Assistant Attorney-General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

READY TO BID FAREWELL TO OPERA TROUPE

Melvin O. Adams, president of the Boston Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad, has agreed to transport the Boston boomers who are going to East Boston to cheer the departing Opera Company next Sunday, in a special boat appropriately decorated, and convey them as close to the Leyland Line pier as possible.

Mr. Adams specified that he be allowed to fly a Dartmouth flag and use the ferryboat Dartmouth. The boat will leave Rowe's Wharf at 10:20, and should reach the other side before 10:30.

The general committee representing the Boston City Club, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Press Club, the Pilgrim Publicity Association and the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange met yesterday afternoon and arranged further details for the remarkable send off for the Opera Company's trip to Paris.

Quite a large sum was contributed for confetti, flowers and other native preparations. It was announced that the Opera Company would furnish a very attractive musical program before the ship sails. Frederick P. Fish, president of the Boston City Club will make a speech for all the organizations. Mayor Curley and Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald will also talk. Resolutions commending the enterprise of the Opera Company in invading Europe and carrying the artistic banner of Boston to the world's capital will be presented.

It was also announced that persons attending the sailing would be permitted to escort ladies. The members of the send-off delegations will assemble with their ladies at the City Club. A special order from the Executive Committee will permit the admission of ladies into the club house for this occasion. All members of all these organizations are invited. At 10 a. m. they will stroll to Rowe's Wharf and take the boat. Many of the party will wear high hats and frock coats, but formal dress is not obligatory.

Guard Lawrence Mills as Strikers Are Invited Back

LAWRENCE, March 25.—Ten policemen guarded the gates of the Pacific mill print works today when they were thrown open to allow the 2,500 operatives who are out on strike to return to their duties if they desired.

Many of the men employed at the mills gathered at the gates at an early hour and were ready to go to work when the whistles blew. Pickets delegated by the I. W. W. strike leaders were on duty to prevent the men if possible from entering the mills.

The officials of the mills served notice on the strikers that the mills would be opened for those who wished to come back. They also stated that if not enough reported for work to run the plant that the mills would be shut down indefinitely.

The men went on a strike ten days ago and asked for an increase in wages and better working hours.

ELEANOR GATES MERCIFUL TO OTHER WOMAN

Eleanor Gates, author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl," which is now playing in Boston, is not disturbed over the divorce suit filed by her husband, Richard Walton Tully, in the Los Angeles courts.

"He probably expected me to bring suit before this," she commented "I suppose he wants to marry another woman. I could not ask a divorce in New York because I would have to involve another woman—which is contrary to the forward movement of women."

Tully is author of "The Rose of the Rancho," and "A Bird of Paradise." He and Miss Gates were married in 1901, immediately after their graduation from the University of California in the same class. They were living in San Francisco till 1915, when they separated. But after a year they reunited with the statement that they "found they could not live without each other and that their differences were all the work of mercenary, mischievous relatives."

They came East in 1913 and took apartments in the Hotel Woodstock in New York. Within a short time after their arrival they separated and Miss Gates took apartments in Fifty-ninth street. In admitting the separation at that time Miss Gates said that she entertained the friendliest feelings for her husband, saying there was no bitterness between them. She said:

"We were separated last Spring about the time 'The Bird of Paradise' was put on. In April I agreed to forget what had given me pain. But I cannot; something is gone that I cannot get back. Mr. Tully and I have different ideas about life. Perhaps I am a little old fashioned. I am sure that I am an idealist, and that does not always make for marital happiness."

When the news of her husband's suit was conveyed by telephone to Miss Gates in her apartment she laughed and said:

"That's very good news, indeed, though I knew nothing of Mr. Tully's intention. He probably expected me to bring a suit. We have been separated a long time, you know, and the probability is that he would like to get married again.

"I have never sued for divorce, you know, for any suit that I would start in New York would have to involve a woman's name. In California the law is a little more merciful and allows a divorce on a sensible ground.

"However, if any woman wants to marry Mr. Tully, she is welcome to him. I am very glad to be free, but when a woman has suffered there is no reason why she should suffer more by going into courts to gain freedom, especially in this State. I, myself, would not name another woman, for such a spirit is opposed to the forward movement of women.

"If people are not happy together, they should separate at once. Indeed, better for society that they live apart than that they should live together and disguise their hatred.

"I am indeed glad to hear the news. I had no idea where Mr. Tully was, whether he was in Cuba, India or California. I have not heard from him for a long time."

Mrs. Newton Adams Denies Divorce Suit

NEW YORK, March 25.—"My husband and I are living apart. We separated months ago, but I am not contemplating a suit for divorce," declared Mrs. Newton Adams, niece of the late Bishop Potter and formerly leader of Newport's social set, composed of the younger element of the four hundred, when she was asked about a report from Newport that she was preparing to begin divorce proceedings.

MILTON 'SET' OUT TO DEFEND CHIEF M'CUE

The call went out in Milton today for society folk who live in the town all-the-year-round to attend the public hearing Saturday afternoon on the charges made against Milton's fire chief, Edward A. ("Ned") McCue.

The "all-the-year-rounders" responded with the word that they would be there with bells on. The which Chief "Ned's" friends declared a victory No. 2 for him, for didn't Philip S. Saltonstall, the town's social arbiter and State street broker, get right up in town meeting and say:

"To have one of our efficient and trusted employes (cries of hear, hear —he means "Ned") brought here under fire is a serious matter?"

And what better proof, asked "Ned's" friends, would you want of the society folks' opinion of "Ned" as an efficient public servant?

The town is sizzling today as a result of the tempestuous meeting of the town Selectmen last night. So numerous were the protests against the "star chamber" session that the Selectmen decided to move into a bigger hall, and when this wasn't able to hold the crowds they accepted Mr. Saltonstall's suggestion for a meeting Saturday.

Fletcher Ranney, a Boston lawyer, who hurled "This is an outrage!" at the Selectmen last night, will be there to defend McCue.

McCue's friends say the charges are "trumped up" and "pure politics." "I do not believe there is any doubt that my case is already decided by a majority of the Selectmen," said McCue, "and that it will make little difference to them whether or not the charges are refuted."

BETTER TIMES NEAR FOR NAVY YARD AT BOSTON

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Working conditions at the Charlestown navy yard will soon be much improved, according to Acting Secretary of the Navy Victor Blue, who assured Congressman Phelan that the apprehension of the workmen over forthcoming furloughs and discharges was not entirely warranted.

"The department records," said the acting secretary, "show that the Rhode Island has been ordered to the Charlestown yard for a three months' general overhaul, beginning April 1.

"On April 15, the Nebraska, Virginia and Georgia will be docked for work that will involve about $7,000, monthly for wireless installation.

"On July 1 the destroyers Ammen, Burrows, Cassin, Cummings, Patterson, Paulding and Trippe will be docked for a two-months' overhaul, and the destroyer Duncan has already arrived here."

"The commandant," continued Secretary Blue, "has had orders that furloughs be granted rather than discharges, where possible."

"When the $148,000 appropriation for the Charlestown yard which is included in the naval appropriations bill is made, available work will begin at once on the building of the new $1,500,000 supply ship."

The acting secretary assured Congressman Phelan that fluctuations in the labor rolls would be materially reduced when all of this work was under way and that labor conditions generally would be greatly improved.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

A new automobile law has been introduced into the New York Legislature which calls for a straight license fee of two dollars on every motor vehicle and permits of the taxation of automobiles as personal property. The idea of the New York framers in making this new bill was that the automobile owner should be placed on absolutely the same plane as every other road user and that the fee for licenses should not exceed the actual cost thereof, the automobile thereafter being taxed as personal property as are horses and buggies.

This is in striking contrast to the Massachusetts automobile law, which places a registration fee upon a motor vehicle according to its horsepower and likewise permits of taxation of the vehicles as personal property. The New York law is now going into its third reading and if it is enacted there is no question but what a year hence some such similar measure might be introduced into the Massachusetts Legislature.

BOSTON SADLY BEHIND IN DANCE SAYS EXPERT

Mme. Joire, sister-in-law of Mme. Paquin, who recently displayed 160 Paquin gowns at the Somerset in Boston, had something to say about Boston's prioness in New York when she prepared to sail for her return to Paris.

"Boston," said Mme. Joire, "was tremendously shocked at some of our backless gowns. Not much was said save in a quiet way. But it was easy to see that in their dignified fashion they were much surprised. In Boston also many expressed their appreciation that the slit skirt had been eliminated from the Paquin frocks.

"Boston is sadly behind, it appears, in the dance. The modern dances are little indulged in in public restaurants. In Paris we who must have fittings until 9:30 are dance mad. But we searched all Boston one evening for a place where my mannequins could dance.

"Your Pullman cars, your hotels, are dreams of comfort. For it all, I thank you."

The French girls that Mme. Joire brought over, and who were accompanied by two American girls, had some difficulty in accommodating themselves to the requirements of an American sleeping car. In France, of course, sleeping cars are all divided into compartments. On their first night out the girls could not be persuaded that upon foreign head might not appear at the curtains. Two of them, as a result, occupied one lower berth, but neither slept a wink, so says one of the historians of the trip.

Yearn for Food—Don't Spurn It

A Brisk Appetite Is a Healthful Necessity. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Quickly Restore Lost Relish for Food.

Unless you have a real hearty desire for food you should by all means take no chances of stomach trouble, for a loss of appetite means a signal of distress from a deranged digestion.

When the stomach wants food it signals the mind through the nerves, and these excite the taste buds in the mouth which at once secrete large quantities of saliva. This is called "mouth water," and all of us know when our "mouths water" we want food.

"There's an appetite that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets gave me."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets very quickly restore appetite by making the stomach want food. The stomach readily recovers from indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., as soon as it is enabled to digest food. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after each meal quickly digest that meal and thus wonderfully rest the stomach.

In a short time the digestion assumes its normal condition and then appetite—and a good appetite, too—is the natural consequence. One may actually fatten a few Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, place them in a glass tube with meat, grains, vegetables, etc., and these tablets will digest the contents of the tube without aid.

Just think then how quickly and efficiently they act when they are mixed with the food in one's system and what a great relief it is to the digestive apparatus to have its fluids so enriched.

WHAT "COLLIER'S WEEKLY" SAYS EDITORIALLY OF THE RIKER METHODS OF CONDUCTING SAFE DRUG STORES

"The Selling of Drugs

A FIRM OF RETAIL DRUGGISTS in New York prints this advertisement:

RIKER AND HEGEMAN DRUG STORES DO NOT SELL

Narcotic Poisons or Habit-Forming Drugs, excepting upon the written prescription of a registered physician. We are in advance of all laws that pertain to the safety of the purchasing public. We believe that Cocaine, Morphine, Opium, Laudanum, Codeine, Heroin, Chloral Hydrate and other Narcotic Poisons should be used only. . . . by the advice of your Doctor, and we do not sell them otherwise.

We notify our sales people in every store that this rule must be rigidly enforced.

The family Doctor is our authority in these matters, and we must have his written and signed Prescription before dispensing anything of this nature.

We take off our hat to these druggists, both for their policy and their business acumen, and hereby give them this advertisement for nothing. "It is a bitter commentary on our laws that the druggist himself (if he is shrewd) can volunteer such an announcement. The law has piteously left this to his discretion. Even in Mantua—that is to say, in Shakespeare's day—Romeo's "wondrous needy" apothecary announced:

Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them.

The law, at all events, was sound, though Romeo got the drugs—by means of that gold that is

Doing more murders in this loathsome world
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell.

The druggists of today, many of them, have no more character than the wondrous needy man of Mantua, upon whose back contempt and beggary hung."

Collier's Weekly, Issue of March 21.

The above method of handling all such drugs applies to every Riker Drug Store.

We endeavor to give the public the best and most reliable drug store service possible, and feel grateful for the favorable comment from such an estimable publication as Collier's Weekly, whose attitude on the subject of Pure Foods and Drugs has always been so strongly expressed to their readers.

CITY CLUB MEN HURT, YES HURT, BY CRY OF DIRT

"The next time we have ladies in the City Club they will . . .
"And we'll have them, because small ladies . . . some of them have very nice ideas . . . Remember the Boston Tea Party."

"We like the ladies, too, indeed.
"But not their entry way.
"To have that set beside their . . .
Would spoil our style, their ladies' throne.
When, as a matter of fact, the . . . needs bath."
—THE CITY CLUB CHIPPER.

"Ladies, whaddaya mean—Dirt?" is the continued complaint of the men of the Boston City Club.

W. T. A. Fitzgerald, Suffolk Register of Deeds, who is credited with knowing what proper housekeeping is, said today that the women of the Women's City Club, who accuse the City Club of being "dirty," are unfair.

Mr. Fitzgerald gently reminds the women that not long ago they were guests of the City Club, receiving luncheon and all sorts of "eats," even to grape juice.

Mr. Fitzgerald's comment puts the women in the position of biting the hand that fed them.

This "dirt" argument comes from the assertion of Miss E. Louise Malloch, of No. 21 Waldeck street, Dorchester, treasurer of the Women's City Club, that the women should not buy the Boston City Club because its bedrooms and kitchen are "very, very dirty."

A broad and wide yowl of protest has been coming from the men of the City Club. Among the club officials is Mr. Fitzgerald. He says:

YES, THERE ARE FACTIONS.

"There are evidently two factions in the women's club, one of which favors the present Boston City Club for a location, and the other No. 40 Beacon street. When any member says that our kitchen is dirty, it is an absurd remark. It is always in excellent condition. You could eat off the floor.

"We gave the women a reception and luncheon, consisting of sandwiches, cake, ice cream, coffee and grape juice. After what we did for them and they had accepted our hospitality, it seems a little unfair for them to make the statements they did."

The canny Registr of Deeds sized the matter up correctly when he said there is a dispute over getting a location for the women's club. It was this that led up to Miss Malloch's remarks, which have caused the City Club much public comment lately.

The women met in the Somerset ballroom—not the City Club—to talk over forming a club house. Miss Josephine A. Brownton mentioned the City Club. Miss Frances G. Curtis preferred the building at No. 40 Beacon street. Then Miss Malloch "panned" the City Club structure, saying:

This building was looked over. It needs a good Spring cleaning, such as only women can give. For the place is very, very dirty, very bad.

This house cleaning would cost about $11,000—quite a sum for house cleaning, but most necessary in this case. We went through the kitchen and the bedrooms and—well, they're very bad!

"OUR GUESTS!" WOW!

When this praise (?) of masculine housekeeping was reported men of the City Club could be seen through the Beacon street windows, running around in circles. Occasionally cries like this could be heard from without:

"Were those our guests?"
"Not on a meeper."
"Is my wife in that women's club?"
"Votes for women?"

Especially the latter. The City Club men are thinking of parading with the suffragettes—if they get cleaned up enough.

Whiffles' New Profession

CHAPTER I.

"I KNOW you'll hate to part with me, and all that sort of thing," began my obstreperous friend, Whiffles, as he and I sat smoking after he had been my self-invited guest for three weeks.

"I know how my lightsome spirit illumines the darkness of my bachelor den—like a canary in a tomb, but, George, I must leave you."

"Don't do it, Whiffles," I said. "I can read by your glint of eye that you are going back to work. Don't do it. Only lecturers become rich."

"Oh, I'm not going to work in the sordid sense of the word," replied Whiffles. "I have a straight business proposition—a plan to make large sums of money easily—and I am going to work."

"Well, what IS the scheme?" I demanded.

"That I cannot tell you. You have a commonplace sense of right and wrong that makes it impossible for me to tell you without placing myself in danger of arrest."

An hour later he strolled downstairs, half dressed apparently, and took his long greatcoat from the wardrobe. To my astonishment he put it on, planted his hat firmly on his head and started for the door.

"Are you crazy?" I gasped. "Do you know you are going out without any TROUSERS?"

Two weeks later he returned in the same greatcoat, but with the nether unmentionables concealed by a pair of decent trousers. He placed a crumpled mass of banknotes—in my hand, chuckling the while with his joy of wickedness.

"Don't spend it," he warned. "I must mail it back to certain estimable gentlemen who gave it to me, George, did you ever know you could take money out of hotels as well as into them."

"Oh, tell it," I said.

CHAPTER II.

"I was dissatisfied, naturally, with the life I was living," began Whiffles, "unable to endure longer the morbid and slightly mercenary companionship of a host who hinted that I was a worthless parasite."

"Black lie, said I, "I told you straight to your chin."

He it so. Bored, then, to death by associating with a man who insulted me because I was poor—(he drew another rotund stock of bank notes from his trousers pocket, looked at them scornfully and put them back)—I took a room at the Palace."

"You fool you go to the Palace as you were when you left here?"

"I did. I believe I was modestly garbed in a greatcoat and concealed any shortcomings in my nether attire. I am sure I was welcomed graciously at the Palace."

"But why the unmentionables?"

"Will you let me speak? I told you I was in need of money—and excitement. There is nothing so thrilling—or profitable—as going about Paris without trousers. Well, I retired early, as is my custom, and hung my outer garments outside my door for the porter to press.

"The porter, an amiable peasant, returned with them in the morning with a bang. He laid them on a chair, and was blowing his way out when I chanced to look at the garments. What was my astonishment to find that there were only two coats and waistcoat on the chair. He had brought back no trousers.

"But there weren't any trousers to——"

"Of course not. You live in such a world of form, George, that it is a wonder to me you do not write encyclopedias instead of novels. You talk just as the porter did.

"I called him back and demanded to know where my trousers were. But, sir, there were no trousers—I have them not.

"What! no trousers! I cried. 'Do you imagine that I came here with no trousers? Do you see any trousers on me? Are there any in this room? I demand to know the meaning of this outrage. Bring me my blood red trousers!'

"But, sir," he began again.

"Stop," I said, 'I will go to the manager. I will not be tricked. I will not be robbed.'

"As I started for the door he had the effrontery to remind me that I was in my sock feet and what you call my 'sumentionables.' I was compelled to throw him several yards across the room.

"Only a hundred and fifty francs," he sighed.

"I had intended to ask payment for my mutilation before his guests. But I forgot it. And, besides, they brought me a pair of trousers. They were very kind, but I was too much distressed to remain at the hotel, in spite of their urgent invitation. I left as soon as I had taken off the trousers and put them in my suit case."

CHAPTER III.

"And you started out again in the unmentionables?"

"Of course. Had they not proved themselves to be made of cloth of gold?" asked Whiffles.

"There are a great many excellent hotels in Paris," went on the brazen liar. "George, I believe I have been in all of them during my absence from you. It is a pleasant life—full of peril and excitement and opportunities to shock people. I might have been enjoying it still had it not been for that most impudent of institutions, the press. I got into the newspapers, and out of my profession."

"You mean you swindled all those hotels in the same ingenuous way?"

"In precisely the same artistic manner." He again pulled the roll of notes from his pocket and smiled at it reminiscently. "Until I reached the Casablanca.

"It was my thirteenth hotel, and I had by apprehensions, but I was received as cordially as at any of the others. How could I know that they had read, as I had, an account in the morning papers of a gentleman who swindled hotels by not wearing any trousers?

"The porter showed me an excellent room, as usual. As usual, I retired early, hanging my garments outside the door. I heard the porter brushing them. How was I to know that the manager and a policeman were standing beside him as he revealed to them the absence of trousers.

"In the morning I rang for my clothes. He brought them. I was amazed to find that there were no trousers. He said I had hung out no trousers. There was a certain determination in his reply that compelled me to be more vociferous than ever. I outdid all my previous fireworks. I demanded to see the manager.

"If the porter had not grinned as he went out I should have been cheated and deceived by those ruffians. That grin made me look through the keyhole. I saw the manager and the policemen whispering with the porter.

"It looked as if all was up. They had played me a cowardly trick. I was trapped like a rat—and by those canaille. I removed my unmentionables that you detest so much and, placing a blanket over my limbs, sat down on the bed to wait my doom.

"The manager came in. He began to bluster accusingly. He laughed sarcastically. He insulted me grossly. I believe he called me a thief.

"'What is the meaning of this?' I asked, rubbing my eyes.

"'You say you have left trousers in the hall!' he cried. 'I know you have not worn any trousers. I know you are the celebrated trouser thief. Officer, take this man.'

"I think there is a mistake, I said. 'I have said nothing about trousers. And when you come to my room,' I continued, with a voice rising to thundertones, 'and accuse me of being a thief, I am bound in duty to thrash off your imbecile head.'

"Then I cast off the blanket and arose and walked at the manager and took him by the collar.

"He could only gasp and gaze at my legs. The policeman was making a dash for the door. The porter's grin was all gone.

"'My dear sir,' my dear sir,' panted the manager, 'I do not understand. I must apologize. My imbecile porter has made a terrible mistake. His head was turned by a newspaper report. You will accept——'

"'Accept nothing!' I yelled. 'Is a man of my station to be insulted in the Casablanca by its very manager? Is a portes to accuse him—a policeman to be brought into his room? You will hear from me later—and not lightly, sir,' I added as I put on my great coat.

"I was soon out of sight of the beasts, but, George, my acrobatic is gone. I was almost caught."

"And will you kindly explain how you were NOT caught?" I inquired.

"What caused the change of heart in your enemies. They had you didn't they?"

"Until I stood up, yes," said Whiffles.

"And, naturally, I had always worn a pair of trousers under the unmentionables," said Whiffles.

MOTHER! NO USE TAKING CHANCES

If your little one's tongue is coated, it, is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a good thorough cleansing at once. If your child is cross, peevish, listless, doesn't eat heartily, or is unnatural; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if fever-ish, give a spoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get genuine, made by "California Syrup Company." Don't be fooled.

EAGAN DRAWS WITH DESHLER IN FAST BOUT

By RINGSIDE

After ten rounds of hard, fast and [illegible] Davy Deshler at Cambridge last night, Joe Eagan of Boston and Young Deshler of Cambridge fought a draw, which was fairly even, as the latter is a favorite in Cambridge.

Eagan had perhaps a shade the best of it, especially in the closing rounds, but the splendid work of Deshler in the early rounds, when he repeatedly staggered Eagan with hard punches to the head, entitled him to a draw.

From the first [illegible] round it was evident that Eagan had no new tricks to learn in the boxing line, as Deshler solved his every style of attack in fashion that [illegible] the second round Eagan [illegible] that Deshler was getting [illegible] after was warned to be careful, as he [illegible] on Sunday very opportunely [illegible] ever.

Exeter Adds to Its Rowing Fleet

EXETER, N. H., March 25—The eight-oared, one two-oared and single shell, with oars, have arrived in Exeter and are stored on the Academy boathouse till the ice breaks, when they will allow the Exeter crews to work on the river.

Beauty

EVERY DAY ACTING AS AN ADDED ATTRACTIVENESS

By MAUDE MILLER

"Aren't ideas the strangest things?" said Miss Florence Reed, who is starring in "The Yellow Ticket." "It seems so queer to have personal ideas on a subject and to feel that there are other people in the world who are pondering on the same subject and yet who come to entirely different conclusions.

"Now the beauty question, for instance. I have my own personal ideas on the subject.

"I believe in them, and I believe that if other people would try the same thing they would believe in them, and yet after all, it's just a personal opinion.

"I believe absolutely in the charm of a finished actress, and by actress I don't mean a professional actress. Not at all. Any woman in the world, if she wishes to try may attain this charm, this mobility of expression, this exchange of something personal in every look and gesture.

"Every woman in the world likes to be attractive to a man. And doesn't she think and wonder why it is that most professional actresses have an attraction for men aside from any particular beauty that they may possess?

"Any woman can have that attraction. It is gained through keeping a man always in doubt as to what is coming next. Man loves to live in a world of unreality. Then woman must learn to create this atmosphere.

"She must learn to enter to his wishes rather than to her own. She must learn to meet every advance of his with a remark calculated to baffle him.

"Men don't like to understand; they like the excitement of the chase; they are like warriors with the scent of battle in their nostrils and when the way is clear there is no impossible to be attained, and therefore much of the excitement is abated.

"Man likes to feel that no matter how much dead monotony there is in his makeup, a woman is constructed on an entirely different plan.

"That she is made like a prism, with a thousand different sides, each radiating a different colored light. And therefore it is the work of an attractive woman, to other words, an accomplished actress, to be able to change her color chameleon-like at will, so as to never quite the same. "This is not an easy thing to accomplish, by no means, but it is worth wearing for.

There is a great deal in close observation of the different types of men. After you have relegated a man to a type, you know how to proceed with your treatment of him and after a while, when it all becomes a habit rather than an effort to be amusing on your part, you will unconsciously broaden so as to actually become the attractive person you have been trying to make up out of the real you.

"Don't that enough of an inducement to prove that I really know what I am talking about"

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE are certain things a woman will say on certain occasions, never varying her remarks nor her inflections by a word or a note, and so certain are these certain things said that failure to hear them would have the same astounding effect as if a man reached out to put the key in his door and found that the door, and the house itself, were no longer there.

To the credit of Woman, this dumfounding experience is one that is rarely met. She may be monotonous in her remarks, but at least she is reliable.

When Daysey Mayme Appleton returns from a funeral Mrs. Appleton, without pausing in kneading the bread or making the little haystacks known as French knots, will ask: "Did take it hard?" Or when Daysey Mayme returns from a reception her mother will as surely inquire: "What did they have to eat?" and though she isn't always conscious that she has asked the question, and seldom hears the reply, she never misplaces her inquiries.

It is a form of feminine greeting that is purely mechanical, and has known no deviation since the days of our own mothers. It is the same all the world over, the mother in the sands of Sahara saying as unfailingly as the mother in the swamplands of Florida when her son appears: "Look at that mud on your feet!"

Lysander John Appleton has lain in an unconscious state ever since 10 o'clock last night, and though every effort has been made to arouse him, it has been unavailing.

The cause will be thoroughly understood by every man, though not many men have known the astounding experience that befell Lysander John. It seems that yesterday evening, immediately after dinner, he put on his overcoat, picked up his hat and started for the door. His wife saw him, but did not ask, "Where are you going?" and he left the house a little dazed.

When he returned an hour later she did not ask, "Where have you been?" and the shock caused him to fall to the floor unconscious, in which condition he has since remained.

"I can understand what a shock it must have been to my father," explained Chauncey Devore. "It is just as if I had come to the breakfast table and my mother had omitted her customary morning salutation of 'Did you forget to wash your hands?'"

RAINS AND POURS

First Lady—Too bad! Mrs. S. always has such abominable weather for her afternoon teas.

Second Lady—Yes; she never pours but it rains.

The Girl With the Chronic Blues

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A YOUNG man writes me:

"I am twenty, and am showing affection for a girl one year my junior. I think a great deal of her. Every time I call at her house we have long conversations on different subjects, and she always appears blue and morbid. Every time I take a walk with her she is always telling of how downhearted she is and disgusted at life, telling me many times that life is not worth the living. Now, I love this girl, and I can't seem to bear such talk. How can I keep her from speaking so hard about life? Every time I bring up a different subject she changes it to say 'What is life?' She is always saying she knows no change in her life, and that the older she gets the worse life seems to her?"

What can you do? You can thank a Merciful Providence that you found out the girl you love is a dismal raven before you married her, and had to hear croak, croak, croak all your life. Evidently she has no troubles now beyond the imaginary ones that come to pessimistic youth. With marriage and years there will come troubles that are real. Can you imagine her wail and whine in those days? My dear young man, it women like she who drives men mad!

That is what you should do. Thank a Merciful Providence that you escaped, but, being in love and hopeful, you don't want to escape. You want this girl for your wife with this fault cured.

Take a leaf from Shakespeare, the greatest student of human nature the world ever knew: Read "Taming of the Shrew," and ponder while you read.

Then call on this sombre-souled girl and groan when you hand her your hat, and from that moment till you take your departure do not admit by look or word that there ever was any sunshine in the world, or that there ever will be.

Get to the task of abusing life before she begins, and make your wails and sighs and moans and groans so deep, so profound, so mournful that in comparison her plaints will be only the mutterings before the storm.

Regret the day you were born; long for the cold tomb in every breath; strew with ashes the path from the cradle to the grave; express distrust of your friends; deprecate every ambition, and, in short, spatter black paint and trim with the habiliments of woe every subject that comes up. Don't do this occasionally, but always. Let your face resemble that of a tired mourner and your talk sound like the wail of a lost soul. Make her know you feel like a grave that is forgotten and all sunk in; out-groan, out-mourn, out-wail and out-weep her; surfeit her with gloom, and she will long, oh, how she will long, for the days when you laughed and thought life a pretty sweet thing, and well worth while.

If such tactics do not cure her, bestow your love elsewhere, for, take it from me, my dear young man, there is no fate in life worse than to sit opposite a raven three times a day and hear croak, croak, croak.

It is such as she who makes life not worth the living.

The Thrilling Story of a Girl Who Won Her Fight for Love Against Tremendous Odds

"I'd like to," she admitted, "but I'm afraid I couldn't. Besides, you couldn't bring an auto down in our neighborhood. Folks wouldn't know what to make of it. We'd never see them down there very often, and I never rode in one in my life."

"So much the better. You'd enjoy it all the more. Come, now, don't be so obdurate."

"So that's what you are?"

"Headstrong; stubborn; anything you like; only let me come down and take you riding, won't you?" He leaned a little closer and held her with his boyish, laughing eyes. "Please," he urged. "I won't make any pretense about the boys. We'll say it's just because I want to. Is that better?"

Here was direct attack, anyway. It was better than the father's insidious plans, if less successful. She had dared not refuse Scott and she dared not grant the son's request, as much as she felt she would like to. She sought refuge in an excuse more voracious than Jack imagined.

"I'm afraid your mother wouldn't like it, Mr. Scott," she parried.

"Please don't ask me again. I'm sure I couldn't do it."

* * *

But that evening he did ask again. He was speeding up Fifth Avenue in the Six when he caught sight of Gertrude crossing the thoroughfare at Twenty-fifth street. He shot by the car to a halt at the curb and called:

"Miss Meyer!"

A SUDDEN MEETING

She turned, startled at the sound of her name in this alien ballwick and then came hesitatingly toward him. "This is my lucky day," he cried laughingly. "I was going to look you up tonight, but I guess it would have been a hopeless job. Do you know I wasn't half finished this morning when the governor's unexpected return ended my visit? Come on and hop in, Miss Gertrude. I'll be a policeman over there and he might get curious if he saw me carry you away by force, and that's just what I'm going to do if I have to."

In a second he was at the wheel with the girl at his side. She sat forward in the seat, as caught hold of the door at her left with the tenacious grip of the unhabituated.

"Now back and take it easy," he arged as the car glided along the smooth asphalt. "I'm not going to tip you out when I've had such a time getting you in. Never had an accident in my life, and that's more than the family chauffeur can say."

He picked his way in and out of a maze of slower moving vehicles, his speed under the eye of the crossing policemen and letting the car honk, clear ahead when he passed them.

Gertrude was so impressed with these operations and entranced by the novel sensation of her first ride that she uttered never a word by the time they reached the Plaza. Scott turned into the park.

"We'll just take a little spin through here," he said her, "and then I'll drive you to your home."

Immulsively she seized his arm and the car swerved to the left.

"Oh, you mustn't do that, Mr. Scott. You mustn't take me home. There'd be a sensation and a scandal in the neighborhood. Mamma wouldn't like it, either."

"Then I'll only take you near it," he agreed. "Don't let's worry about that now. I'm enjoying myself too much to think of consequences. How about you?"

"It's perfectly wonderful."

A WONDERFUL RIDE

Her testimonial came in soft, awe-inspired tones, but flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes gave it seat.

"You're perfectly wonderful, too," was what the boy at her side wanted to say. He felt the thrill of her presence and her charm. There came to him that intuitive sense of perfection, completeness or what you will. He knew only that he was happier than he had been in his life, and that he wouldn't have relinquished the joy of that particular moment for any earthly boon or duty.

Instinctively his free hand stole over and clasped hers. There were barriers of kid and cowhide, but the ecstasy of touch, of proximity, possession, prevailed. She made no attempt to withdraw her hand, and so, with the car's pace slackened, in attune with this subtler mood, they rolled on through the winding driveways until they had circled the park. The big monument to the Maine's heroic martyrs loomed ahead. To young Scott its graceful figures seemed like ogres calling him out of fairyland. It meant the end of the ride, for she had told him he must leave her at the park's entrance.

He drew the machine to a halt in the statue's shadow.

LOATH TO GO

"Surely you don't have to get out here," he said. "If you won't tell me where you live you can tell me the direction. Is it the East Side?"

She nodded her assent and made no attempt to leave. Evidently she was as loath to go as he. She, too, had been in fairyland and the way out is much harder than the way in. At the moment of her hesitancy he shot the car ahead.

"I'll take you to the elevated. You can't object to that."

"No, but you mustn't go a step farther."

He left her at the elevated stairs. "Goodby, Gertrude," he said heredatily. "We'll have another jaunt like that soon."

"I don't know," she answered softly as she stood looking down at him.

"But you liked the ride?"

"I loved it," she said deliberately, and turned and ran up the stairs.

What Home Dancing Will Do for You

No. 2—Ballroom Dances Versus Simple Acrobatics.

"I am in favor of the acrobatic dances."

By Margaret Morris

(Of "The Queen of the Movies" Ch.)

IN this article I said that I would explain the difference between the benefit derived from the ball room dance and the more acrobatic dance of the stage which can be practiced at home any time. I myself am entirely in favor of the acrobatic dance for this reason:

There is really little or no physical benefit to be derived from the modern dance, because there is not enough bodily exercise.

In the tango, the only muscles exercised to any extent are those between the knee and the ankle. The arm movement is also slight, and the bodily movement lies in the bending back of the body as illustrated.

This movement is used to some extent in the maxixe, but really not enough to make any difference in the slenderness of the waist.

Of course, it is better to dance the modern dances constantly than not to dance at all, but a combination of both would be ideal.

What dancing has done for Miss Morris's back and shoulders

You could use the acrobatic steps at home, practicing diligently every day, and then dance the ball room dances for the mere pleasure of dancing. For me, however, I would far rather practice my splits and cart wheels and so forth. I made a specialty of tango dancing once, and it wasn't any time at all before I began to feel stiff, all the limberness seemed to have left the upper part of my body, my feet were nimble enough, but my body seemed all out of sorts.

I learned a lesson that time which I have never forgotten, and when I went back to my favorite work, I limbered up in less than a week.

Ball room dancing is nice for finishing touches, or one phase of a remedy.

The shoulders can be beautified, although the process is slower than that offered by the more strenuous movements.

Stage dancing is not so much fun though, if you simply practice the physical movements. That means work without any pleasure, and that is why I spoke of learning to use the movements in a dance as soon as possible.

The "backward bend" movement.

The Humbug of Spring

By THE PESSIMIST

"Spring! Glorious Spring!
It makes you go ting-a-ling-ling!
The birds lift their voices,
The green world rejoices,
It's Spring, glorious Spring!"

TWADDLE! Rubbish! Don't blame the poet; blame the Spring!

And here is a sample of the stuff turned out at so much per yard by the scribes who are seized with inspiration in the Spring, on the Spring. Which is worse, the "poetry" or the prose, I leave to you.

Ah! How glorious is Spring! How glorious! Earth has heaved herself away from her Winter sleep, and is awake. Alive! Alert! Awake! In the hedgerows can be heard the throbbing thrill of the thrush. It is Spring! The buds are bursting into beauty. It is Spring. The nodding cowslips are being nibbled by the cows; the apple blossom flings far its perfumed fragrance; the diminutive daisy dots the greensward. The—oh, yes, there's more of it; this is only an extract—"the daffodils dip in delirious delight; the jonquils join in the joy; it is Spring!"

Now, what is the truth—the bare, bitter truth?

Spring is treacherous. Don't leave off your overcoat, and show the state of your coat in the Spring. It's shabby. When you lived in gas, fog, and variations of dusk, twilight, and darkness, it passed muster. But because the Spring has come—glorious Spring, you must get a new suit. And if you are one of those who have been marred by matrimony, you can, and must, get a new costume for HER as well.

SPRING MEANS SPOTS. Yes, you get spots on your face in the Spring, and are thankful if you are spared boils. You have to take Spring medicine—sulphur, or senna, or something equally nasty. But it's necessary, because it's Spring.

SPRING IS TREACHEROUS. Don't doctors declare that Spring is a treacherous time? They are right. What about those March winds, eh? They go through you like a knife. What about the April showers? Deluges often. Look at the death rate in Spring! Be careful you don't send it up by a decimal point. It won't comfort you in the least to know that it happened in Spring, glorious Spring!

SPRING IS DECEITFUL. You leave off a thick Winter vest because the sun shines warmly for two days, that's the deceitfulness of Spring. On the third day it snows, sleets, rains and freezes.

SPRING MEANS HARD WORK. Because it's Spring you must dig and delve in your garden. You will have a backache from stooping; a heartache as you survey the weeds; a headache as you study the fiction in the catalogue; and a pain in the neck as you buy the seeds that go in but don't come up. You roll the lawn and get the curve of the spine in your back and your shoulders. If you miss these you probably burst a blood-vessel. At the least you'll get badly blistered.

SPRING MEANS SPRING CLEANING. This wilful wickedness perpetrated by wild women, this—this—No; I can say no more! You know and I know what it means. Only, remember, it comes in the Spring!

And don't forget that in the Spring those Christmas accounts which you ignored now come in indorsed "Final Application," or "Unless payment is made within ten minutes legal proceedings will be taken." Another Spring joy!

Enough (not that there isn't more)! Spring ought to be suppressed.

What Thin Folks Should Do to Gain Weight

Physician's Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs, who, having tried unsuccessfully to gain flesh by physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to lifelong thinness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered regenerative force makes fat in the tissues of thinness, and is also unequalled for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable discovery is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this peerless preparation, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people every where. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A months' systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. Leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve tonic and vitalizer, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

Surrendering National Rights FOREVER for the Temporary Comfort of a President

Former President Taft says that the exemption of American domestic commerce from paying tolls at Panama does NOT violate the treaty.

Mr. Taft's ability as a politician has been questioned; his ability as a lawyer, never.

Mr. Wilson says that to maintain the sovereignty of the United States at the Panama Canal IS a violation of the treaty. He gives no reasons and quotes no authority.

Mr. Wilson has been regarded as an able politician, never as an able lawyer.

When he adopted Mr. Andrew Carnegie's idea of making Panama an Anglo-American canal he was badly advised both as a politician and as a lawyer.

Secretary Knox successfully maintained the right of the United States to regulate its own domestic commerce and to grant favors to its own ships in the Panama Canal, built, paid for and EXCLUSIVELY OWNED by this nation.

Mr. Bryan favors surrendering American rights to Great Britain. This step, once taken, is irretrievable. It will be unending as a concession to Great Britain—a dangerous precedent recognizing Great Britain's rights at Panama in peace and war.

As authorities upon law and foreign treaties, which are more competent—Mr. Taft and Mr. Knox, or Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan?

Mr. Taft and Mr. Knox not only maintained American rights as long as they were in office, but they have stated the REASONS WHY THE AMERICAN CONTENTION AS TO THE CANAL IS LEGALLY, MORALLY AND PATRIOTICALLY SOUND.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan give no reasons why they think American rights should be surrendered to Great Britain. They simply ask permission of Congress to surrender.

President Wilson has been very successful in his control of Congress in his domestic policies, but his foreign policies as to both Japan and Mexico are suffering from a weakness or paralysis that appears to be fatal. Mr. Wilson informs Congress that he will "not know how to deal" with complicated foreign questions unless Congress repeals the Panama Act at Great Britain's demands.

This means that our rights at Panama are to be given away FOREVER in return for TEMPORARY support of the President's policy by Great Britain as to Mexico and Japan.

Do the American people really desire the President's policies as to Japan and Mexico continued?

Would surrender to Great Britain at Panama make the President stronger anywhere?

Was any man ever made stronger by an act of weakness?

When Their Voting Weak-Minded Brother Died—

The Two Old Sisters Lost Their Income. No Vote, NO INCOME

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

"Votes for women is all nonsense.

"Men protect women better than women could protect themselves—women don't need votes."

You have heard that kind of intellectual talk.

In reply, you may quote the incident of the two old women who lost their two-dollar-a-week "poor money" when their feeble-minded brother died.

The story was told at a woman suffrage meeting.

A R., daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, and a S., daughter of the late William C. Whitney, were going up and down in Long Island, after the manner of Satan in the Book of Job. But they were going up and down doing good instead of harm. They were investigating the use of money from the poor fund by politicians.

They found two poor, tearful old women weeping because they had been deprived of a weekly allowance of two dollars for groceries which a generous public had bestowed upon them out of the poor fund. One of these two old women was entirely helpless. The other, very feeble, could no longer make a living as dressmaker, because, as she said: "the big stores can sell a dress, all made, for less than I have to pay for the materials."

The two dollars a week had been taken away from them just after they had buried their feeble-minded brother, WHO COULD VOTE. When there was no longer a vote in the family, the sympathetic politician who controlled the poor fund had taken away their two dollars.

And, the most interesting and enlightening fact, the politician had given the two dollars a week for groceries to another family in which there WAS a gentleman voting. And that gentleman who, at this moment gets the two dollars weekly, is one who recently left his own wife to her fate because she was old and uninteresting, and because somebody more pleasing came along.

A young woman told that story. She said she thought there was something wrong in a system which gives two dollars a week of poor money to help two poverty stricken old sisters, as long as they have with them a half-witted brother ABLE TO VOTE, and takes the money away from them when their brother dies, giving it to a gentleman who had abandoned his own wife, but COULD vote and thus make himself useful to politicians.

How many readers of this newspaper doubt that government and the world would be better if men in office were compelled by votes for women to ask themselves, "What do the women want and need, and what is our duty toward them?"

Could you imagine anything more enlightening, more shameful, more infamous in a petty, miserable way than the treatment inflicted upon these two old women when their voting, feeble-minded brother died?

And does woman suffrage need any better argument. Do you want any more complete answer to the idiotic statement, "Women don't need to vote."

HOW BILL GOT ALONG

When Bill met Emily and her mother he was quite flustered, but had to make the best of it. He was glad enough to see them, but he did not want them to know he was living in such a dingy place and that he was so poor. Both Emily and her mother were delighted to see Bill, and Emily's mother kissed him, saying they had brought some things from home that his mother had made for him. As there was no other place where they could sit down, Bill had to ask them up to his room and was busy trying to think of excuses all the way up the stairs in case his friend Jim was in and had been drinking. But he wasn't there, and Bill apologized as best he could for the smallness of the room.

Emily and her mother didn't appear to notice the dinginess of his surroundings—they were too interested in seeing BILL. Emily's mother told him that there was a cake, some jars of jelly and some warm underclothing that his mother asked them to bring him and that his mother wanted him to be sure and dress warmly, take care of himself and not to catch a cold. Just like all good mothers have said since the time when the first young man left home to go out and conquer the world.

They talked about the old home and tried to get Bill to come back there and leave Boston, but Bill couldn't see it that way. They had come to see Bill in a taxicab and it was waiting out in front. They asked Bill to go out to dinner with them, but Bill made up a hurried excuse that he could not go.

As he was escorting them downstairs to their cab his friend Jim passed them in the hallway, and as Bill could see that Jim had been drinking he did not stop to introduce him. Bill promised to be sure to come and see them before they went back to his home town. And as the cab rolled away Bill was conscious of an awful lonesomeness as he went back up the steps to his room. THE ORGAN

T. L. D.—There is no proof that the "organs" referred to in Genesis iv., 21 were true organs. The passage in General refers to all wind instruments in general and is far from proving that the specialized instrument known today as the "organ" was then in use. The Hebrew word "ugab" or "ugrab," rendered "organ" in the King James version, denoting a pipe, or perforated wind instrument, as the root of the word indicates. In the new version the word is rendered "pipe." The Book of Genesis was put together in its present shape (along with the rest of the Deuteronomic Code) toward the close of the seventh century, B. C., while the organ cannot possibly be traced father back than around B. C. 200.

The Irishman Who Tamed the Iroquois

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

ONE hundred and seventy-six years ago there came to this country a vessel from the Emerald Isle bearing among its human freight a young man of twenty-three who was to exert a tremendous influence upon the fortunes of this continent.

The young man's name was William Johnson, to be known later on as Sir William Johnson, king of diplomats, natural born soldier and statesman, and the greatest tamer of wild Indians that ever lived.

Johnson was born in the County of Meith, Ireland, in 1715, and might ever have remained there had he not fallen desperately in love. When he told his love to the black-haired, blue-eyed beauty who had enthralled his heart, he was rudely rejected, and in his sorrow he resolved upon suicide. But the love-sick swain was intended for something better than that of filling a suicide's grave. Sir Peter Warren, an uncle, solved the problem by sending Johnson to look after his large landed possessions in the Mohawk Valley.

The young man had hardly planted himself in America when he began to make his influence felt. Among the red men he became at once a king. By the magical power of his personality he made them both love and fear him. His great common sense, iron will and unfaltering justice made him the "Great Father" of the savages over whom no other man, white or red, was able to exert the least control.

The value of Johnson's power over the Indians was seen all through the mighty struggle between France and England for supremacy on this continent. By keeping the formidable Six Nations true to the English cause Johnson may be said to have saved the day for the colonists. The strategic importance of the State of New York in the French-English war was immense, and it was Johnson's diplomacy in preserving that importance for the English that finally turned the scale in their favor.

The Power of "Music"

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—Is it a fact that a wine-glass can be broken or shattered to pieces by a musical chord?

A.—I had a huge glass bowl one foot in diameter resting on its glass stand. The flint glass was from one-quarter to three-quarters of an inch thick. I resined a violin bow, drew it across the edge, and the concert hemisphere of solid glass disintegrated into hundreds of small pieces. The sound of breaking into fragments was entirely unknown to me—a crashing or grinding, and the bits of glass flew far apart.

I had used this same bowl before classes for several years, with violin bows. But on this particular day the students as well as I were surprised at the breaking and unearthly noise.

The fact is, I happened to vibrate the bowl with the key-note; that is, set harmonic rate, which means the precise rate with which it was able to vibrate to send forth that note, for notes are rates of vibration, and they all obey rigid and beautiful harmonic mathematical laws, and these agree with other set and fixed laws.

SOUND IN A DESERT.

Q.—To our class in physical geography this question was put: If dynamite was exploded in an uninhabited desert would there be any sound?"

A.—No, sound is an effect; it is an appropriation in the aural organs of the brain, only, of the energy stored in waves. This appropriation of energy is sensed as sound by the personality. This process is totally unknown, and must remain unknown until it is discovered what a person is.
